

WFWP Madrid, Spain Speech Contest: What I would do for you, Mother Earth!

Marcia de Abreu

April 29, 2023

There were three finalists who competed for a prize of 400 Euros.

They were Anais Carolina Vega, 24, Biologist, who spoke very structured about what one can and should do for our Mother Earth. Some of her examples were brilliant, like that of a net of oranges.

The second candidate was Fabeyra Curiel Lopez, 24, Lawyer and the first prize winner, whose presentation was very well knitted.

The third candidate was Nerea Mafarki, 25, a dancer and singer, whose creative interaction with the public conquered us all.

The jury, composed by friends of WFWP had difficulty to decide: María Jesús Cañellas, Journalist, José Luis Barceló Director of a digital newspaper and Armando Lozano, UPF representative in Spain. Marcia de Abreu, WFWP Spain president, gave the welcoming and closing words for the event.

Through this type of experiences, women can become closer to WFWP and wish to collaborate in the future.
