WOMEN'S FEDERATION FOR WORLD PEACE USA

Dear WFWP-GWPN members, friends, and supporters,

Thank you to those who were able to attend the HerStory Award ceremony live on November 18, 2023!

Each HerStory recipient was selected for her courage, compassion, and commitment to using her gifts and talents to uplift others, despite often overwhelming challenges. On November 18, we heard the deeper "story behind the story" of their many accomplishments.

In case you missed the program or would like to share the stories of these women with others, please click the link to the recording below. You can also read more of each of their stories on our website, linked below.

We look forward to seeing you at the upcoming GWPN Webinar on November 30 and December 2 HerStory Award!

Sincerely,

Dr. J. Ester Davis grew up in the Houston area with parents who taught her the value of education and service to others. Her father served in World War II and was a patriot, even though the family endured racial segregation and discrimination. They knew that their own value was bestowed by God.

Ester's first job out of college was with the Eastman Kodak Company, and she worked in the New York and Texas markets for 24 years. She graduated from Barbizon Modeling School and was an instructor there for two years. She started The Lace Glove Modeling and Etiquette program for inner-city teens in Dallas. She is the host/producer of the Ester Davis Television Show, currently available on YouTube, dedicated to encouraging positive activities for the sake of a better community.

Ester is a staff writer for the Dallas Post Tribune newspaper and other print and online publications. She earned a doctorate in religious studies in 2017 from Grace International Seminary in Dallas. Her deep faith in God and sincere Christianity have always been front and center in her public activities. Ester has served in many volunteer capacities, including Southwest Regional Director for the National Council of Negro Women. She also served as chair of the Dallas Senior Affairs Commission under four different mayors and has received many honors from the City of Dallas for her ongoing service efforts.

Dr. Davis is known far and wide in Dallas for her compassionate activism, especially on behalf of young people. In 2017, she helped escort a contingent of about 150 inner-city youth to Washington, DC, on a bus tour, for which she raised donations from hotels, local businesses, and others. Many of these youth had never been outside the city of Dallas. Wealthy businesspeople, various politicians, and many others have fallen under the spell of Ester Davis and supported her projects when asked. Ester's hobbies include playing the piano and riding a vintage bicycle around her Oak Cliff neighborhood, where she has lived for over 30 years. She is a faithful attendee at the Greater New Zion Baptist Church and has played piano for their services. She's the widow of a Korean War veteran, and the mother of two sons, two adopted sons, and six grandchildren.

A Fighter for Her Community... that's the phrase that is most often associated with the name Margo Lomax Davidson. All of her life she has fought to advance the interests of vulnerable communities from her days as a broadcast journalist in her quest to provide true and accurate information to the listeners of black-owned and operated radio in the City of Philadelphia or later as the founder of two non-profit organizations. Margo also served her community in elected office for 11 years and completely shifted the political landscape in her suburban count through her own brand of service first, particularly to communities that had been un or underserved for decades.

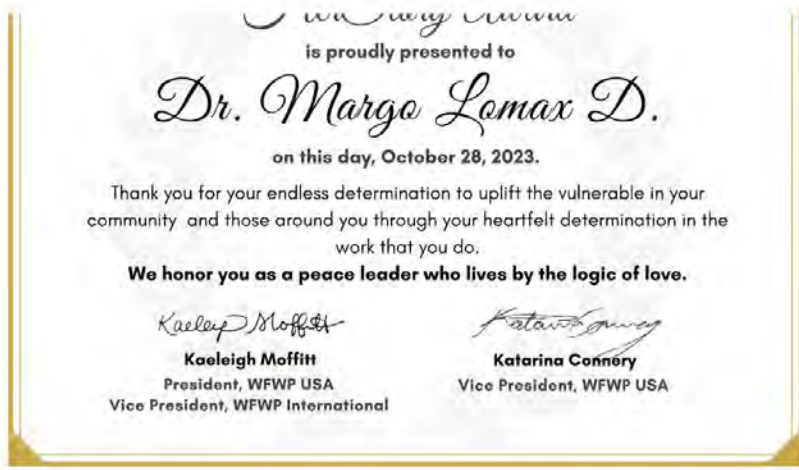

Ordained as a minister in 1986, Margo Davidson was divinely inspired and consequently co-founded her first non-profit organization as part of her ministry to children whose parents were addicted to alcohol and other drugs and to the parents themselves. That organization, Anti-Drug & Alcohol Crusaders (ADAC), founded in 1989, is still thriving today and serves nearly 200 children and families annually in the heart of the City of Philadelphia. It was built to last and is now serving its second and third generation of urban youth in its "Safehouse" programming. After leaving ADAC in capable hands Margo worked for the Department of Public Health, Coordination Office of Drug & Alcohol Abuse Programs, CODAAP. Margo was pivotal in assisting the department in creating community Partnerships throughout the City of Philadelphia to create and sustain viable drug prevention and intervention programs. Margo also later led the city's "Save Our City's Kids" program that created greater awareness about the correlation between drug and alcohol abuse and child abuse. Under Margo's leadership, the program also achieved greater coordination of services among city agencies that addressed both child and substance abuse. Margo additionally ran a boutique public relations, non-profit management, and program development consultant agency, Davidson & Company for nearly 30 years beginning in the mid-1990s. Margo helped many non-profit organizations develop programs to address the needs of the community and to increase positive engagement with the communities that they served as she assisted these entities with board development, program development, strategic planning, grant proposal writing, and fundraising plans, to name a few services. She was featured in numerous local print radio and television programs as an expert on these topics. True to form, Margo tirelessly assisted individuals and organizations in the pursuit of their aspirations - focusing on people who had historically and consistently been denied access and opportunities through traditional vehicles. The US Small Business Administration for the great services it provided to women and girls. All of her organizations allowed Ms. Davidson to use her proven ability as a trainer, organizer, marketer, and events planner to advance the aspirations of her individual and organizational clients and most importantly to her uplift underserved communities.

Margo recently completed an intense training program to be a credentialed coach through an International Coaching Federation, ICF, accredited program and was named the top coach of the cohort. Her focus is Executive Coaching for leaders of high-impact community-based organizations.
