During the month of September, WFP Honduras in Central America has been trying to create projects for those who have been affected by the pandemic.

Honduras is in a tough situation financially and even when it comes to national security. As a result, the medical system is not set up the way it should be within the country.

WFP Honduras volunteered to gather sanitary products and provide food support for those in need in Tegucigalpa, the country's capital. As a group, they were able to distribute these items at local centers and homes.
