

Love Letters For Valentine's Day - The Story Of Our Life Together

During the 40 years of our married life on the earth Dietrich and I wrote many letters to each other, and we kept them all. They reveal the story of our life together, the romantic beginning, the hard struggles, and the true love centered on God that deepened over the years into an eternal, sacred bond.

For Valentine's Day this year I want to share some excerpts from our letters:

To Dietrich:

"When you looked at me for the first time, I could see God in your eyes. There was so much understanding, goodness, and very deep love. I was so moved at that moment. How happy God must feel when He is at the center of a family. God can express Himself fully through a family, and that man during his lifetime must experience three kinds of love. It will be a wonderful adventure together to reach perfection!"

From Dietrich:

"You are more in my thoughts than my studies, and I still find it hard to fully get back to my class schedule. It feels to me that Heavenly Father performed one of His miracles to bring us two together. My whole outlook on life is changed since I became a married man."

When we visited our families in Europe, mine in France and Dietrich's in Austria, we faced many difficulties.

To Dietrich:

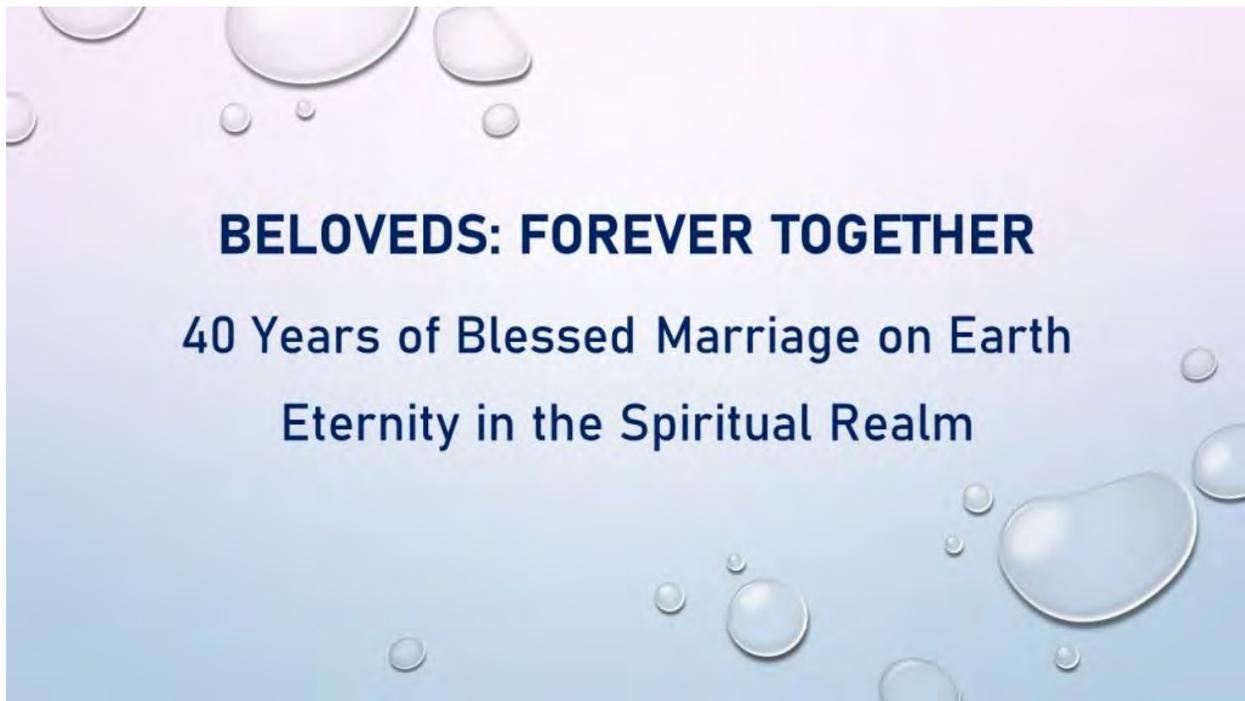

"My heart was so very painful the whole day and I know your heart was too. One thing for sure is that our ancestors have to unite together too, and this is a very difficult process. The fights are not only between both of us but between different nations."

Dietrich's encouraging response:

"We both know that we will find ourselves closer to each other if we both serve the higher purpose. ... So much I wish we could always be deeply united with the love of our Heavenly Father. We have to determine every day to walk the path of restoration together and this way unite our family, our ancestors, and our countries. I will be with you in your prayers. I embrace you with all my heart."

Before he passed, Dietrich told me "I will be always with you, forever together." And it is true - sometimes I receive a hug from him in the eternal realm!
