"It has been a joy to support the children in Jordan to receive precious education, giving them hope to be able to take care of their own future. Thanks to all who contributed so far.

♥ In order to complete our goal we like to appeal one more time to share from your resources to bring hope to children in the Middle East."

♥ with love from our President Angelika Selle

How can we bring joy to children in need?

This is what WFP Jordan President Mrs. Fusayo Irikuri asked herself, especially as she learned of an increase of crime among youth and children in the crowded and needy neighborhoods of Jordan's capital. Many of the students from the Jordan Arabic Literacy Project also have been forced to work part-time in order to support their families during the pandemic.

"The need for an education curriculum in which our children are taught to respect and understand others is becoming more evident."

Thus, rather than focusing only on academic support and tutoring, WFPW Jordan also provides many opportunities for children to experience joy and receive character education through service projects, sports, and drama performances. No matter what these children may experience in the future, with a good foundation in their youth, they can overcome anything with a positive attitude and determination.

DRAMA TRAINING & PERFORMANCE

- Mrs. Irikuri and her dedicated volunteers regularly train children to act out a drama, portraying a particular moral.
- They perform in front of their parents and other student.
- Through this, the children gain confidence and also experience joy by making others, their audience, happy.

STREET CLEANING CAMPAIGN

- Most of the children experience being scolded as they make trouble for their neighbors.
- When they clean the streets together, instead they hear "Thank you," which makes them feel proud and happy.
- Through this, they learn by serving people, they can experience joy.
