Boston Bombings - A Call to Prayer and Action!

Angelika Selle
April 16, 2013

Dear friends of WFWP USA,

Our hearts go out to the victims of yesterday's bombing in Boston, and their families!

We are grateful for the many lives that were also spared, like that of our recently appointed newsletter editor and young mother, Tamara Starr, who was literally only a couple of blocks away when it happened.

It makes us realize that in the face of such viciousness and callousness we really need each other -- family and friends to help us through the shock and pain, since in the end this affects all of us and we are in this all together. Therefore, for me and for many, this is also a serious wake-up call to ongoing prayer as well as a call to action!

Dear women, wives, mothers, we all are called at this time more than any other to step out of our comfort zone at home and to use our God-given innate gifts of love, compassion, sacrifice, service and nurturing and extend ourselves to this wounded world!

Acts like this attack, and many others of lesser brutality, are signs of lack of love, lack of clear guidance on moral principles and, most of all, lack of healthy role models in today's society of how to live a wholesome and righteous life in service to others.

You and I CAN make a difference if we decide today to do even one small thing every day, reaching out to those in our circle of influence with love, attention and care, together with our husbands, fathers and brothers.

We here in the Women's Federation for World Peace are committed to never give up on God, who is alive and well, and we feel responsible to work in His stead as we care for His children and each other. And one more thing: As a woman, please take care of yourself, your health and your well-being, because you're needed by those around you.

With love and prayers,

Angelika Selle
President, WFWP USA
