May 11, 2022

Argentina -- At the monthly Ambassadors for Peace meeting on May 11, 2022, we presented the Leadership and Cooperation Manual from the 2022 Series (1), at the main hall of the Merchant Marine University (UdeMM) in Buenos Aires (2). The event had 65 participants, in compliance with the maximum capacity due to current sanitary conditions.

It was an emotional, on-site reencounter, after two years of having to develop most activities and initiatives in a virtual platform. Laudatory welcoming remarks were given by Luis Franchi, engineer and dean of UdeMM, and Ambassador for Peace Silvia Gabriela Vázquez, secretary of University Extension at UdeMM and director of the University Social Responsibility Chair (3).

On this occasion, we introduced the representatives of the different leadership areas inaugurated in Argentina in the last few years, asking them to share their expectations and commitment and to encourage more participation in their specific areas. The first representatives were Parlasur Parliamentarian and engineer, Humberto Benedetto (by video message), and National Senator Dr. Silvia del Rosario Giacoppo, representative of IAPP-Argentina (4), host of the IAPP inauguration on November 30, 2017 at the National Senate.

The next to come on stage were representative of the Sikh Dharma Community Argentina, Inderveer Kaur, representative of IAPD-Argentina; UPCAM president, journalist Adrián De Angelis, representative of IMAP-Argentina; a new member of the UPF-Argentina's Global Peace Council, Prof. Julio Nardini, representative of IAAP-Argentina; vice-president of the Hispanic Literary and Cultural Institute (ILCH), Prof. Bertha Bilbao Richter, representative of IAACP-Argentina; and economic analyst and expert in transcultural negotiation, Dr. Jorge Tuero, representative of IAED-Argentina (5).

All representatives received the 2033 Argentina Project Manual, an initiative that involves all leadership areas, along with the initiatives, programs and activities that are being developed in Argentina. Through this, we seek to "contribute to change and to empower a leadership that can regain the destiny of greatness which our ancestors and patriots imagined for all inhabitants of this blessed land and region." This is a project in development, mainly through the different areas, and which requires explanation. "But we have 10 years to reveal what it is about," said Miguel Werner, president of UPF-Argentina, in a brief presentation (6).

Participants were given the 2022 Peace Road folder, which is an annual project of UPF-Argentina along with other organizations. With the 2021 theme: "To perform actions in each of the 23 Argentinian provinces through proposals that arise from provincial institutional representatives: solidary, educative, ecological, artistic, sportive, intercultural and interreligious. The folder was first given to Ambassadors for Peace Christian Oreb, general coordinator of Red Cooperar (7), and journalist Patricia Pitaluga, president of the Civil Association Acercando Naciones. Both have been long-time institutional partners of this global initiative in Argentina. Next to receive the folder were the new Ambassador for Peace Luciana Zambrano, who is in charge of public relations for 2022 Peace Road Argentina, then, all representatives of leadership areas and other organizations that belong to the 2022 National Organizing Committee.

"Today is a great day... being the first Ambassadors for Peace meeting that gathers us in a very special way, since it is on-site... We are together once more... We have endured such difficult, painful, sad moments... This has not stopped great people from having good actions... We thank our Heavenly Parent because we are here and are able to celebrate Life... we have to live in happiness and Peace... We have to do everything with love... All for love..." was expressed by Ambassador for Peace and journalist Luba Opeka, public relations of UPF-Argentina. She was the emcee along with Professor Emanuel Sayavedra, secretary general of UPF-Argentina.

Next, there was an international message by Dr. Simón Ferraboli, secretary general of UPF-South America, who focused on leadership values and good practices -- commitment to the common good, opposed to the search of individual good, which has lapsed into corruption (8). The National Anthem was sung, honoring the day of the patriotic march, written by Vicente López y Planes with music by Blas Parera, a song proclaimed as an Argentinian "anthem" on May 11, 1813 by the Assembly of Year XIII.

Poet and writer Nélida Pessagno shared her poem, "Alarido," "which is based on the last drama of war, which occurs with the same cruelty of all wars, with no exception" (9). Nélida is an Ambassador for Peace and Godmother of UPF-Argentina's poetic-artistic contests, honorary member and former president of the Argentinian Writers Society, recognized by the Legislature as Outstanding Personality in the Field of Culture of Buenos Aires City.

The music was organized by composer and singer Alejandro Nizzero, who first performed two songs by Nino Bravo: "Libre" and "América," and at the end sang one of his songs, related to the work and mission of UPF and Ambassadors for Peace, with the context that in such difficult times humanity suffers: "Pidamos por la Paz" (Let's Ask for Peace) (10).
