Over 70 Unificationist nurses, doctors, and other front-line workers are fighting the Covid-19 pandemic.

Our Very Own Covid Responders

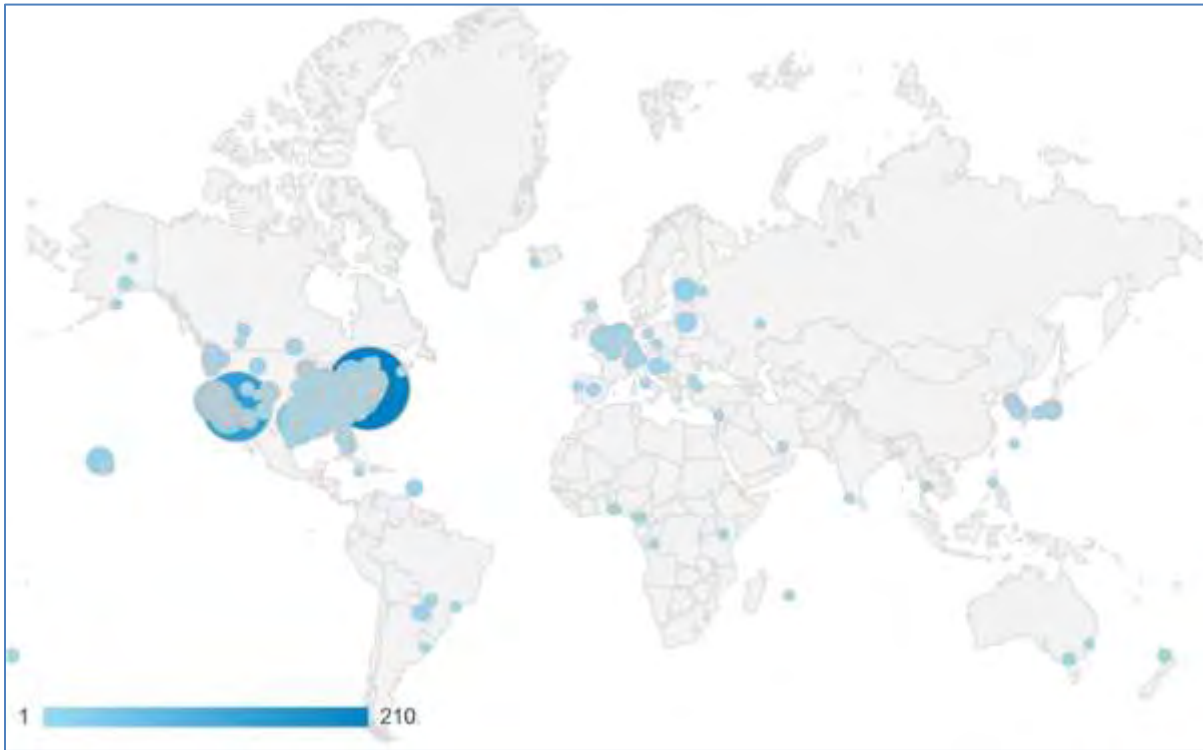

Nurses across the country are being honored this week in celebration of National Nurses Week from May 6 to 12. As nearly three million registered nurses in the U.S. provide a range of life-saving care, countless communities have shown immense gratitude for their ongoing efforts. A special album on the Family Fed USA Facebook page now pays tribute to more than 70 Unificationist nurses, doctors, and other front-line workers fighting the Covid-19 pandemic.

“My unit is usually a post-cardiac surgery care unit, but it was converted to a Covid unit because the hospitals in this area have been overrun with Covid patients,” said Mija Maldonado, a Unificationist nurse in New Jersey. “At one point my hospital was

80 percent Covid patients.”
