True Parents Are My Parents

Gertrud Koch, 85, brought last night's Chosen audience to tears with her sincere stories about True Parents and the early European members. She spoke of True Parents as "my parents."

"If there is a serious searching or heart to come to know True Parents and God, then you are not only physical, you are also spiritual. If you don't invest yourself spiritually, you will not experience God," said Mrs. Koch.

Host Rev. Demian Dunkley asked Mrs. Koch, "When is it time to retire from a life of faith?" Mrs. Koch answered with a laugh, "You never think of that. As you grow older, like I am now, I always keep track of what True Mother is doing and connect with brothers and sisters all over the world."

A filial daughter, through and through.

E-Learning In A Pandemic

UTS Students Sound Off

Students often look forward to the day they graduate. But this year, the Class of 2020 is graduating in the midst of the global COVID-19 pandemic, where many public commencement ceremonies have been canceled. Strictly online classes and now virtual graduations have become a big adjustment for millions of students, including those at the Unification Theological Seminary (UTS) in Barrytown, New York, which held its virtual commencement on Saturday, May 23.

“Balancing classes with everything in life is already challenging, but especially this past semester,” said Naokimi Ushiroda, a Unificationist and assistant pastor of the Clifton Family Church in New Jersey. Part of a special student cohort, Pastor Naokimi has been pursuing his Master’s Degree in an accelerated program at UTS where reading is lengthy and deadlines for papers are tight. He is also a husband and father working full time in his ministry role, currently as the interim pastor during the senior pastor’s maternity leave. “I’m focusing on the positives of this pandemic situation,” said Pastor Naokimi. “We had to physically meet every week for one of our classes in New York City before the pandemic, but then that class was switched to online, so that saved time on commuting.”
