

The petition echoes the words of both Mother Moon and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., stating that social progress is not achieved through conflict. More than 500 people have already supported the cause, with a goal of 1,000 signatures. "We were really inspired to be more active during the Chosen workshop earlier this year, and we know that God needs everyone's faith and love to bring peace to the world," said Stephen Child during a recent online pastors' meeting among Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (FFWPU) USA leaders.

The couple also set up a shaded stand outside their housing enclave -- with social distancing and sanitizing guidelines in place -- where they share Dr. Moon's recently published memoir. "We want to share Mother Moon's face, memoir, and teachings as much as possible," said Stephen. "We have had so many people stop by our table and we talk with them about the Mother of Peace. Everyone just pours their heart out; they are worried about America and don't know what to do."

Dr. Moon, who co-founded FFWPU alongside her late husband Rev. Dr. Sun Myung Moon, has been tirelessly working toward global peace for more than six decades. Growing up in war-torn North Korea, she has launched numerous peacebuilding initiatives worldwide, including an international movement transcending racial, religious, and ideological boundaries. Her memoir shares an intimate look at her life's journey. "We have a big 8x4 poster next to our stand that advertises Mother Moon's book," said Stephen. "We want people to ask about her and learn more about her."

The petition and book stand has inspired many community members to share about the Mother of Peace in creative ways. "We are very proud of the Childs; they always put their whole heart into everything they do," said Rev. Larry Krishnek, FFWPU-USA northwest regional director. "They have so much heart and investment for God and Mother Moon."
