Soft Open Under Strict Guidelines

Online Services Still Strongly Encouraged as COVID-19 Cases Continue to Rise in the U.S.

“We have gloves, sanitizing equipment, temperature guns—you name it,” said Rev. Levy Daugherty, pastor of Atlanta Family Church. “Everyone has to wear a mask, even when we’re singing. We have ‘the shield’ mask available, too.”

It’s a dramatic change to church services around the U.S. in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic. Atlanta is among several Unificationist communities that reopened church service this month with safety measures in place. Only communities with permission from their FFPWU subregional directors are being allowed to open under the strictest guidelines.

“We aren’t in full swing yet, but we’re prepared,” said Rev. Daugherty. Outdoor check-in now keeps tabs on who is entering the building, and chairs spaced away from each other ensures social distancing. “Families can sit together, but other people are sitting six feet apart,” said Rev. Daugherty.
