10 Days, 10 States

Some highlights from Peace Road's journey this past week.

Nearing the final stretch of the Peace Road: Reconciling All People national tour, the diverse team of young Unificationists spent the past 10 days traveling multiple states in the Midwest, Southwest, and now, the West Coast. They have joined local clergy and public figures at each stop, sharing messages and prayers of peace and reconciliation for America at various historical sites.

Launched in 2015 by Mother of Peace Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, co-founder of Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (FFWPU), Peace Road is an international movement bringing together people of all backgrounds to bike, walk, and drive in solidarity for peace.

Here are highlights of the trip from August 7 to August 17:

Mother of Presidents

The Peace Road team arrived in Ohio, the birthplace of the most U.S. presidents, to pay homage at the Underground Railroad in Cincinnati on August 7. Gathering in front of the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center, the group absorbed the history of the site where an estimated 100,000 enslaved people sought freedom for 240 years.

"I felt something tug at my hand while reaching out over the water," said Minister Carmen Allen, who shared with the group that she placed Dr. Moon's memoir above the Ohio River nearby. "The other Peace Road participants helped me up from the river's edge, like the abolitionists helped pull the slaves unto the shores of Ohio. I am grateful to Mother Moon for her courage and perseverance to see peace take root on earth and bring humanity back to God."
