FFWPU Europe and Middle East: Government's Media-Driven Religious Cleansing in Japan Today

Knut Holdhus October 8, 2025

Norishige Kondo, Legal Affairs Director of the Family Federation in Japan, delivering his message at a civil society side event September 26, 2025 in room 11 in the UN Office at Geneva, Switzerland.

Evil media-driven religious cleansing: How public opinion was turned against the large faith minority the Family Federation

A message by Norishige Kondo, Legal Affairs Director of the Family Federation in Japan, delivered at a civil society side event 26th September organized by the NGO the Universal Peace Federation (UPF) in conjunction with the 60th regular session of the UN Human Rights Council (HRC60) in Geneva. The side event had as theme "Japan and Human Rights - Religious Cleansing in Japan: Eradication of an Entire Faith Community". Slightly edited.

The head table at the side event September 26, 2025 in Room 11 in the UN Office at Geneva, Switzerland organized by the Universal Peace Federation (UPF)

See another message from the side-event: Using Schools to Break Faith: Japan's Policy

See another message from the side-event: UN Expert: "Japan's Illegal Dissolution Request"

See another message from the side-event: Japan: Ex-EU Envoy Warns of Religious Crackdown

My topic today is "The Danger of Religious Eradication Based on Public Opinion Manipulation".

The official name of our church is Family Federation for World Peace and Unification. However, I think you are familiar with the former name the Unification Church. So in my presentation, I will use the abbreviation of the former name: "UC". [See editor's note 1 below]

Both opposed by left-leaning mainstream media: Here, former Prime Minister Shinzō Abe meeting with then President-elect Donald Trump at Trump Tower, 17th November 2016

On 8th July 2022, former Prime Minister Abe was assassinated. The suspect claimed his motive was his mother's donations to the UC two decades earlier, which had "led to the collapse of his family." He also resented Abe for sending a video message to UPF, an affiliated organization of the UC.

But can such an excuse for murder really be accepted?

Nevertheless, an anti-UC lawyers network immediately took advantage of this incident to launch attacks on the UC.

Let me explain the basic stance of the major media in Japan. Japan's major media outlets are in general left-leaning. They tend to be hostile to conservative politicians such as former Prime Minister Abe. In fact, just as the mainstream media in the United States strongly opposed President Trump, the Japanese major media consistently opposed Prime Minister Abe.

Minority religions also became convenient targets for such attacks since criticizing "cults" was a way to boost rankings.

Because the UC and its affiliated organizations took an anti-communist stance and actively campaigned for the enactment of an anti-espionage law, the media were particularly eager to criticize the UC.

3 leading activist leftwing lawyers from the anti-UC lawyers' network called National Network of Lawyers Against Spiritual Sales - from left: Masaki Kito, Hiroshi Watanabe, Hiroshi Yamaguchi

Knowing the tendencies of the media, the antiUC lawyers' network exploited the Abe incident to attack the UC, creating a false impression of the UC. They categorically labeled the UC as a "great evil" and the cause of Abe's assassination. They gave the impression that the UC was still causing massive economic damage nationwide. The lawyers' network spread propaganda that the UC was a "dangerous cult", that all UC members were victims under "mind control", and that all donations constituted victimization.

消費者庁

Consumer Affairs Agency, Government of Japan

Logo of the Consumer Affairs Agency (CAA) of Japan, an administrative agency under the Ministry for Consumer Affairs and Food Safety. Under a law enacted on 10th December 2022, the Consumer Affairs Agency gained authority over matters related to donations between religious organizations and their followers. Previously, the Agency for Cultural Affairs held sole jurisdiction over all administrative matters involving religious organizations. This legislation aims to address issues such as donations to new religious movements like the Unification Church

The lawyers' manipulation of public opinion succeeded, and the Japanese society came to be dominated by the perception that the UC was nothing less than a heinous criminal organization.

In Japan, being an island nation, society places strong pressure on individuals to conform. During World War II, anyone who opposed the war was condemned as unpatriotic.

Likewise, after the Abe incident, members of the Diet who had attended UC-related events or even just sent a simple congratulatory message, were harshly criticized in the media and pressured to issue apologies.

Under this sustained campaign, Prime Minister Kishida finally declared that the Liberal Democrat Party (LDP) would cut ties to the UC.

Later, we found a table published on the website of the Consumer Affairs Agency, showing the number of consultations received by consumer centers concerning the UC compared to the total number of consultations.

According to this data, in June 2022, just before the Abe incident, consultations concerning the $\underline{\text{UC}}$ accounted for merely 0.003% of the total.

This bar chart compares the number of consultations handled by consumer centers regarding Japanese major new religious groups, including the UC.

Our lawyer recently researched it and according to it, in 2021, the year before the Abe assassination incident, the number of consultations concerning the $\underline{\text{UC}}$ was 27, whereas Japan's largest new religious group accounted for 67 cases, more than twice as many as the $\underline{\text{UC}}$. The $\underline{\text{UC}}$ was only third or fourth among them.

Changing the law overnight: Former Prime Minister Fumio Kishida. Here, at press conference 14th August 2024

Later, a periodical [Consumer Law News] was found in which a major lawyer of the anti-UC network stated that the number of consultations related to the UC had declined. He said they were struggling, being overwhelmed with consultations from small unfamiliar groups rather than UC-related consultations.

The fact that only the UC became the target of attacks can be explained by nothing else than political motives.

In principle, when the government finds its decision was wrong, it should correct its course. However, like large objects such as a train, once it begins to move, it cannot stop easily. And the government didn't stop.

In October 2022, the government abruptly changed its interpretation of the Religious Corporations Act overnight, declaring that even civil torts [civil wrongs causing alleged harm] could constitute grounds for dissolution

The government enacted new laws and policies:

- a new law to restrict solicitation of donations
- a new law to promote claims against the UC
- a governmental decision on anti-UC instruction in schools.

Taro Kono, government minister who brought extreme leftwing lawyer Masaki Kito, who is hostile to the Family Federation, in as special advisor to the Kishida government

Finally, on 13th October 2023, the government filed a lawsuit seeking the dissolution of the UC. They even submitted fabricated evidence to the court.

Instead of giving up the lawsuit, in court, the UC exposed the fabrication of evidence.

Normally, the courts should have dismissed the dissolution petition (request).

Instead, it recognized as ground for dissolution - based merely on speculation - that there must be unknown victims, while it recognized that there were few actual civil cases. Thus, they valued false impression over facts.

The manipulation of public opinion also reached local governments. Several local assemblies adopted resolutions declaring the cutting of ties with the UC.

In Fukuoka City, the government decided not to allow UC and its related groups to rent public facilities. As a result, the UC could no longer hold Christmas gatherings and even peaceful marches were considered obstructive.

In Shimane Prefecture, support for volunteer activities by UC members was terminated. In fact, local authorities went as far as to order the removal of flowers planted by children as part of their volunteer work.

In Yamaguchi Prefecture, UC members were refused to eat at a restaurant.

When the UC or its affiliated organizations filed defamation lawsuits to restore their honor, the courts dismissed them all.

One of the abnormal cases was UC member Toru Goto's case. He had been a victim of deprogramming [See editor's note 2 below] for 12 years and five months and he sued the deprogrammers. In 2014, during his case, the UN recommended that Japan act against deprogramming [See editor's note 2 below].

Protesting the coercive faith-breaking (deprogramming) business in Japan. Toru Goto (second from the right, front row) and others from the National Association of Abduction, Confinement, and Forced
Deconversion Victims participating in a protest march, 10th February 2025, Suginami Ward, Tokyo

As a result, he ultimately won his case at the Supreme Court in 2015. However, after the Abe assassination case, an anti-UC journalist announced in a TV program that Mr. Goto had simply been a social recluse (hikikomori), which meant that he had won the deprogramming [See editor's note 2 below] case by a false claim.

Mr. Goto filed a defamation lawsuit. At the first instance, he won, but at the second instance, the court reversed the ruling based on the testimonies of the very defendants of the deprogramming [See editor's note 2 below] case - the deprogrammers.

It can be said that Japan as a whole is completely dominated by false impressions of the UC. This problem has even influenced actions in a neighboring country. Under the prevailing social climate that "cults" must not be allowed to influence politics, even Mrs. Hak Ja Han, the Co-Founder of the UC, was arrested in South Korea.

Persecuting people who hold a certain faith based solely on manipulated impressions is like the Holocaust.

We sincerely request the protection of our human rights from the international community.

Thank you for your attention.

See another message from the side-event: Using Schools to Break Faith: Japan's Policy

See another message from the side-event: UN Expert: "Japan's Illegal Dissolution Request"

See another message from the side-event: Japan: Ex-EU Envoy Warns of Religious Crackdown

[Editor's note 1: In Japan, the approval by the authorities for the Unification Church to change its name to Family Federation for World Peace and Unification was given in 2015.]

[Editor's note 2: Coercive faith-breaking ("deprogramming") in Japan refers to the practice of coercively attempting to separate individuals from their religious affiliations or beliefs, typically through intervention by family members, professional faith-breakers (deprogrammers) or organizations hostile to new religious movements (NRMs). This phenomenon often targets members of such movements, e.g. relatively large faiths like the Family Federation or Jehovah's Witnesses, but also smaller groups like Happy Science (Kōfuku no Kagaku) and other newer religious movements.

Also subject to faith-breaking attempts: Members of Soka Gakkai. Here students belonging to the faith in 2001. Photo

However, also Soka Gakkai, a Buddhist-based lay organization with more than 8 million Japanese members, and affiliated with Nichiren Buddhism, has occasionally been subject to faith-breaking attempts.

The practice gained attention in the latter half of the 20th century, particularly in the 1980s and 1990s. Parents or concerned family members often hired faith-breakers who taught them how to abduct and forcibly detain believers. Almost all such cases involved confining the individual believer and cutting him or her off from the religious community. During the confinement, the believer was subjected to intense questioning or indoctrination designed to break his or her faith. The aim was to "rescue" the person from what the family often had been tricked by faith-breakers or lawyers to regard as harmful influence from the religious organization.

Critics of forced de-conversion argue that it violates fundamental human rights, including freedom of thought, religion, and association. Reports of psychological trauma and accusations of unlawful detention have sparked debates over its ethical and legal implications. In response, some religious groups, particularly NRMs, have lobbied for greater protections against such practices.

Japanese courts have been inconsistent in addressing cases of coercive faith-breaking. While some verdicts have condemned the practice as illegal detention, others have been more lenient, citing family concerns about "mental health" or alleged "exploitation" as mitigating factors.]

Related to media-driven religious cleansing: Lawfare: State Uses Legal System in War on Faith

Also related to media-driven religious cleansing: MEXT's Legal Spin and "Dissolution at All Costs"

Also related to media-driven religious cleansing: UN Report: Japan's Lawfare Against Faith Minority

And also related to media-driven religious cleansing: Protesting No Transparency in Closed-Door Trial

More, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Dangerous Flaws in Dissolution Order Decried

Also related to media-driven religious cleansing: "Lawyers Lying and Shaming Japan" for 50 Years

And also related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan Following the Way of China

And also related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan's Dissolution Case Echoes China's Playbook

More, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Media/Legal Expert: Communism Behind Persecution

And more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Militant Lawyers Dictate Government Policy

More, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Collusion to Rob Minority of Its Rights

And more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: State and Media Creating "Today's Non-Citizens"

Still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan Copying China: State Seizure of Churches

And still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: 12 Religious Freedom NGOs Denouncing Japan

More, related to media-driven religious cleansing: 4300 Abductions and Forcible Detentions

And more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan: Families Fear for Graves of Loved Ones

Yet more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Lawyers Manipulating, Coercing, Lying

Also related to media-driven religious cleansing: Kishida Follows Anti-Family Federation Minister

Also related to media-driven religious cleansing: Militant Lawyers Dictate Government Policy

Still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Malicious One-Sided Government Source Selection

Yet more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Kishida's Self-Defeating Populist Decisions

And still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan Urged to Make U-Turn

And yet more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Dangerous Precedent to Crush Religions

And even more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Tendentious Reporting by New York Times

Still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan Criticized for Glaring Rights Violations

Even more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japan Following the Way of China

Yet more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Japanese Communists' Final War

Still more, related to media-driven religious cleansing: Political and Social Activism behind Oppression

Arbitrary Detention Of Mother Han, Pastor Son

- October 7, 2025
- Knut Holdhus

Free Mother Han and Pastor Son: A call to defend democracy in South Korea as weaponization of law against faith is exposed

See also Firsthand Account of Ordeal of Mother Han (82)

See also Law as Weapon: Old Age and Frail Health Ignored

See also Mother Han's Arrest and Purge of Faith in SKorea

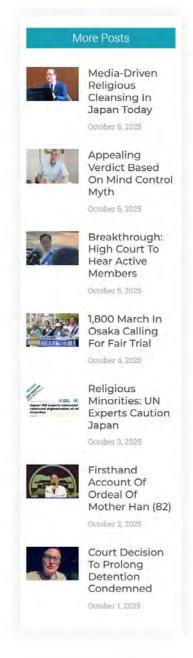

See also Court Decision to Prolong Detention Condemned

On 7th
October, noted sociologist of religion Dr.Massimo
Introvigne

Dr. Massimo Introvigne, here 16th June 2025. Photo: UPF

published a searing indictment in Bitter Winter magazine on human rights and religious freedom of what he

terms South Korea's "crisis of democracy". His article, "Free Mother Han! Free Pastor Son! Confronting South Korea's Crisis of Democracy", is both a call to conscience and a meticulous documentation of human rights violations taking place in a nation once celebrated as a model of democratic governance in Asia.

Introvigne focuses on the arbitrary detention of two religious figures - Dr. Hak Ja Han, the spiritual leader of the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (FFWPU), and Pastor Son Hyun-bo (손현 보) of Busan's Segyero Church (세계로교회 – literally: To the World Church) - whose cases, he argues, expose a dangerous erosion of due process, religious liberty, and political freedom in South Korea.

A Democracy in Peril

Introvigne opens with a deeply human moment: the message of Chance Son, a son worried about his father's deteriorating health in prison,

> "My family went for a 10-minute visitation earlier today, my dad has caught the flu, and his voice is almost gone. He won't be able to get a prescription and medicine until about 10 days later. Please pray that his health doesn't get worse."

September 2025. Screenshot from video by

Pastor Son Hyun-bo, here August 2025. Photo: Bitter Winter

the issue at stake is not abstract politics but the suffering of real individuals Pastor Son, Introvigne explains, has been jailed not for any proven crime, but for exercising his constitutional right to encourage civic participation. His sermons, which reportedly urged congregants to support candidates sympathetic to his values, have been treated as "illegal electioneering". This criminalization of religious speech, Introvigne suggests, signals a chilling shift from democratic pluralism to ideological persecution.

strategic - it reminds readers that

The heart of Introvigne's article, however, centers on Mother Hak Ja Han, the revered co-founder and spiritual leader of the Family Federation. Her detention, he asserts, is emblematic of a broader campaign to dismantle her movement through a blend of legal manipulation and psychological pressure. He documents in stark detail her grueling interrogations - nearly 25 hours over two weeks - despite her advanced age and frail health. These tactics, he writes, are not a "search for truth" but "psychological attrition", designed to break the will of a religious leader through exhaustion and humiliation.

Legal Pretext, Political Motive

Introvigne's critique of the Korean authorities is scathing yet precise. He dismantles the prosecution's claims that Mother Han misused Federation resources for political purposes, noting that no credible evidence has been presented linking her personally to any wrongdoing. Even the core allegation - that the Family Federation orchestrated mass political enrollment into the People Power Party (PPP) - has collapsed, with inflated figures quietly revised downward from 110,000 to 3,500, according to media reports. For Introvigne, this unraveling case illustrates not the impartial operation of justice but a politically motivated witch hunt targeting a faith community unpopular with certain segments of Korean society and government.

Logo of the People Power Party (PPP), currently the main opposition party in South Korea.

He contextualizes this within international legal frameworks. invoking the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR)

and the UN Standard Minimum Rules
- commonly known as the Tokyo

Rules and Nelson Mandela Rules. South Korea, as a signatory to these instruments, is bound to ensure that

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

pre-trial detention is exceptional, not punitive; that interrogation is humane; and that detainees receive adequate medical care. The treatment of Mother Han and Pastor Son, Introvigne argues, violates all these standards. In denying medical access to Pastor Son and subjecting Mother Han to excessive questioning, South Korea is betraying its democratic credentials and breaching its international human rights obligations.

A Wider Crackdown on Conscience

Importantly, Introvigne situates these arrests within a larger pattern of democratic backsliding. He notes that protesters against the government's pro-China policies and critics of President Lee's administration have faced intimidation and surveillance. The same state apparatus that once safeguarded pluralism now appears to be turning against dissenters of all kinds – religious, civic, and political. The legal system, he warns, is being "weaponized against dissent". The implication is grave: when religion, speech, and assembly are criminalized, democracy ceases to be a living reality and becomes merely a facade.

Transnational Repression

Introvigne also exposes the international dimension of this campaign. He points to the coordinated pressure between Japan and South Korea to weaken or destroy the Family Federation. Japan's March 2025 court ruling ordering the dissolution of the Federation – currently under appeal – was widely condemned by human rights experts and the United Nations for violating freedom of religion and association. Now, South Korea appears to be following suit through judicial harassment and arbitrary detention. In this sense, the persecution of Mother Han is not an isolated domestic issue but part of a regional pattern of religious repression, with chilling implications for all faith-based organizations in East Asia.

China, North Korea, South Korea, Japan. Public domain image. Cropped

A Call to Action

Throughout his essay, Introvigne's tone oscillates between legal analysis and moral outrage. His conclusion – "Silence is complicity" – is a direct challenge to the international community, including the United Nations and global human rights NGOs. He demands a firm response; investigation, condemnation, and advocacy. The slogan "Free Mother Han! Free Pastor Son!" is not mere rhetoric but a moral imperative, encapsulating the defense of freedom of religion, freedom of conscience, and the rule of law itself.

For

Is South Korea copying China? here, from a Falun Dafa parade in Berlin in 2007, portraying persecution of Falun Gong members in China. Photo: Wikimedia Commons. License: CC Attr 2.0 Gen

activists supporting the Family Federation and religious liberty, Introvigne's article offers more than a report – it provides a framework for mobilization. It underscores the necessity of international solidarity among believers and human rights defenders. The cases of Mother Han and Pastor Son highlight that religious persecution can arise even in advanced democracies when governments allow ideology and expedience to override justice.

una expedience to evernae justice.

Why It Matters

What makes Introvigne's analysis particularly powerful is its recognition that the persecution of one faith endangers all. The erosion of due process for unpopular religious minorities sets a precedent that can later be used against anyone. If an 82-year-old spiritual leader can be interrogated for 25 hours and a pastor jailed for urging citizens to vote their conscience, then the democratic foundations of South Korea itself are at risk. This is not merely a crisis of two individuals – it is a crisis of principle.

Conclusion

Dr. Massimo Introvigne's "Free Mother Han! Free Pastor Son!" is both a warning and a rallying cry. It exposes the profound moral contradiction of a democracy that persecutes religious figures under the guise of law, and it demands a global response grounded in compassion, justice, and truth. For those who stand for religious freedom, human dignity, and the sanctity of conscience, the message is clear: now is the time to speak out, organize, and defend the rights of all who suffer for their faith.

To remain silent in the face of such injustice is to permit the slow death of democracy itself. To speak, to act, and to demand justice is to affirm the universal truth that faith is not a crime – and freedom is not negotiable.

Text: Knut Holdhus, editor

Featured image above: From a prayer vigil in front of Seoul Detention Center 4th October 2025. Screenshot from video by FFWPU

See also Firsthand Account of Ordeal of Mother Han (82)

See also Law as Weapon: Old Age and Frail Health Ignored

See also Court Decision to Prolong Detention Condemned

See also Mother Han's Arrest and Purge of Faith in SKorea

See also Co-Founder, 82, Ouestioned 9 Hours by Prosecutors

See also Denying Allegations: Hak Ja Han (82) in Inquiry

See also Ugly: Arrest Warrant Sought for Hak Ja Han (82)

See also Critics Warn of "Authoritarian Drift" in SKorea

See also 70 Years On: Detention History Repeats Itself

Related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Trump Raises Alarm Over Church Raids in Korea

Also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Mike Pompeo Calls Probe of Co-Founder "Lawfare"

Also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Korean Faith Crackdown: USA Urged to Confront It

Also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Korean Bribery Scandal: Media Clears Federation

And also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Raids Blur Line Between Justice and Politics

More, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Heavy-Handed Raid on Sacred Sites Condemned

And more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Scholar Sounds Alarm: State Raiding the Sacred

Even more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Raids as Political Spectacle and Media Trials

And even more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Religious Freedom: 330 Faith Leaders Speak Up

Yet more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Yonhap: Repeated Allegations Create Public Bias

Still more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Japan Following the Way of China

And still more, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Warning of Threat from CCP Fearing Korean Unity

And also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Japan's Dissolution Case Echoes China's Playbook

Also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Communists of

China Exploiting Assassination And also related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: "Lawyers Lying and Shaming Japan" for 50 Years More related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Lawfare: State

More, related to arbitrary detention of Mother Han: Lawfare: State Uses Legal System in War on Faith

Previous Next Appealing Verdict Based On M... Media-Driven Religious Clean...

