

Call to judgement: I openly invite everybody - every individual, every family, every group - to judge me

I openly invite everybody - every individual, every family, every group - to judge me. Make me look old, faithless and slow. Make me look weak, timid and cowardly, or make me look stuck in the mud of resentment.

There is one thing:

Real judgment, effective judgement, lasting judgement is by example.

Judge me by showing how it's supposed to be done. You can use words to judge me, but without setting the example yourself it's a waste of energy.

We often overlook that when champions used words to judge, they were talking about what they had done. There's a world of difference between saying what you think someone else should be doing, and doing it yourself.

I propose that we put our holy books and our scriptures down, we cease scanning them for evidence that someone else is wrong, and that we pour our energy into overcoming the challenges we all face in making what we believe into a living, breathing everyday reality that anyone can experience.

So judge me, please. With your example. Do better than I ever did in the same situation. Make me look like I'm standing still and doing nothing.

Make me look like a feeble, burned out old man with no faith. I will be cheering you on and praying for your victory, whether in this world or the next.
