

Dr. Moon's Political Philosophy

Tyler Hendricks
November 26, 2018

In her November 12-13 addresses, Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon rallied the gathered clergy around what is essentially the American political philosophy. Dr. Moon told them, "God raised this country as a democratic nation, which means that a single leader does not make the decisions, but that it considers the greater good and strives to have good policies and politics [in response to] public opinion."

And she reminded them that the mission of the churches, mosques, synagogues and temples is to move public opinion in a godly direction and teach the leadership of each generation through the world scriptures.

"That is why ...the religious leaders, ...are the owners of this nation. When pastors take good care of their church members and bless many families, their church will prosper and politicians will naturally follow them. ...The center of this nation is not the president. It is the ministers; you are the owners. The president changes every four years, yet you are eternal."

Dr. Moon was repeating what the American founders said:

"No civil government of a republican form can exist and be durable in which the principles of [the Christian] religion have not a controlling influence."

"The Bible is the best of all books, for it is the word of God and teaches us the way to be happy in this world and in the next."

"Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."

"[T]he only foundation for a useful education in a republic is to be aid in religion."

"The moral principles and precepts contained in the scriptures ought to form the basis of all our civil constitutions and laws."

"Far from being rivals or enemies, religion and law are twin sisters, friends, and mutual assistants. Indeed, these two sciences run into each other."

"Religion and morality are the essential pillars of civil society."

"Men, in a word, must necessarily be controlled either by a power within them or by a power without them; either by the Word of God or by the strong arm of man; either by the Bible or by the bayonet."

Cheered on by her husband and the American founders in spirit world, Dr. Moon challenged the clergy: "you must educate this democratic country's president."

And she told them exactly the content of that education.

(Citations: Speeches of Dr. Moon at the Nassau Coliseum and Long Island Marriott, Uniondale, NY, November 12, 2018, and at the East Garden Breakfast Banquet, November 13, 2018, East Garden, Irvington, NY; words of John Adams, Benjamin Rush, Noah Webster, John Jay, James Wilson, George Washington, Robert Winthrop, see tothesource.org/religious-liberty/misquoting-our-founding-fathers/)