“To Achieve a Unified World, We Must Know and Understand the Creator of This Universe, God.”

By John O’Neill

The words in the heading of this article are from Father S.M. Moon the founder of the Universal Peace Federation. Further words from Father Moon: All the customs of the past must be discarded and humanity must find the path heading toward a unified world centred on God. The true owner of the world is God and until we attend God as the true owner, we cannot realise lasting peace. Throughout history, God sent countless religious leaders and righteous people to guide humanity along the path of virtue and righteousness. Jesus Christ was lord over all life because of his unparalleled form of loving, giving and sacrifice. Jesus’ example is the standard for all mankind. We must live the life of Jesus and give ourselves totally for the benefit of others so that others might have life. Selfish individualism is doomed. The answer lies in the hearts of men, in the quiet revolution from selfishness to unselfishness. He who gives most will know God most deeply. The free world including the USA is now revealing its main weakness, which is the lack of a guiding ideology. This void is the result of material affluence, a confused sense of values, and secular humanism spreading its influence. Today’s world is awash with problems. Extreme selfishness and individualism have given rise to hedonism. Corruption has pervaded all aspects of social life, and marriages and families are breaking up. Many young people are losing touch with their conscience, swept away in a flood of immorality, drugs and crime. God hates licentiousness the most. Because of licentiousness today’s America and Europe face the fate that befell Sodom and Gomorrah and Rome. If we say that there is no God then human beings are no better than machines or animals, then there is no basis for morality. Without a belief in the spirit and eternal life people take no responsibility for each other and can commit terrible atrocities. To stop the rush toward corruption and immorality and ingrain goodness in people, we need to establish a true sense of values and a corresponding standard of universal morality. Falsehood can be conquered only by the truth.

GENERAL IMPORTANT NEWS

END DIY ABORTION – JUSTICE FOR BABY LILY

Alitheia Williams - Public Policy Manager at the Society for the Protection of Unborn Children: Abortion providers are again ramping up their attempts to decriminalise abortion – that is, remove it from the criminal law, and make it available on demand, potentially with no time limits. They are using the cases of women who are being prosecuted for illegal late term abortions to make their case. The trial of Carla Foster was the first to come to public attention. Ms Foster, a mother from Staffordshire, was sentenced to imprisonment after it was found that she lied to abortion provider BPAS to obtain abortion drugs well past the legal limit for abortion. Her daughter Lily was born dead at 32-34 weeks’ gestation. There are now several other cases before the courts. But what do these cases have in common? BPAS claim that there is a “concerted drive towards criminalising women suspected of ending a pregnancy”. This is nonsense. What these cases have in common is that they have happened since abortion giants like BPAS started sending women abortion drugs in the post, without proper checks. Removing abortion from the criminal law won’t stop tragic cases like this. What needs to be removed is this policy which means women can obtain abortion pills without checks and take them over the legal limit. That is why, at the SPUC National Conference, we launched a new campaign, Justice for Baby Lily, calling for the end of the pills by post policy. We have produced a comprehensive new briefing, laying out the many ways that this policy has failed women and babies. Please read this briefing and familiarise yourself with the evidence. If we are to end abortion, the first step is to end these DIY abortions. The first stage of this drive is a campaign calling on the Health Secretary to end this deadly policy. We have produced a postcard that makes it easy for people to send him a message. (We will also copy the postcard to the relevant minister in the devolved Governments, if this applies to you). Please order copies of the postcard to distribute in your communities. We need thousands of postcards to send a clear message that this policy must end. It has failed women and failed babies like Lily. Please return all completed

The weapon needed for this is Godism, which also motivates people through a spiritual awakening which will turn them away from the self-indulgence and corruption rampant in the affluent free world. God established true love as the highest and absolute value. All people are to harmonise, exist and live eternally through God's principle of investing for the sake of others. People throughout the world today are starving for true love. Politics and religion cannot be separated. Those who are responsible for their nation must wake up at dawn and offer devotions in front of Heaven. They must pray. They need to ask Heaven, "As someone who is responsible for this nation what do you think I should do?"

The great civilisations throughout history prospered because of their spiritual and moral foundations. In the UK our laws, culture, institutions, customs and values have been based on our Judeo-Christian Heritage. No society in history has been able to survive for long without a strong moral code. Studies by historians such as JD Unwin and Arnold Toynbee reveal that, whenever societies and nations turn away from the universal moral and spiritual laws rapid decline is inevitable. In the UK there has been a 10-fold increase in crimes and enormous increases in social problems since the advent of the sexual revolution and the permissive society in the 1960's. The core message at the centre of all the laws and commandments contained within all the major religions is for their followers to do good by loving and serving others. Living for the sake of others is a universal law of heaven and earth. All the wars and conflicts in our world today such as the Israeli/Palestinian and Ukraine/Russia wars could be stopped if the universal moral and spiritual laws concerning serving, loving and forgiving others were applied to all the war scenarios and that all the relevant leaders could realise that, in Almighty God's eyes, we are all his children and one family of mankind.

The 3 blessings in Genesis in the Bible are God's blueprint for peace, happiness and stability in our world. 1st Blessing consists of men and women perfecting their characters and inheriting God's loving heart through living for the higher purpose, the good of all mankind, and living for the sake of each other centred on the universal laws and commandments. The 2nd Blessing consists of Godly men and women having a family. In that family all the different kinds of love are experienced: parental love, children's love, siblings love and conjugal love. The 3rd Blessing consists of God-centred men and women taking care of the creation and developing their creativity. The family is the only institution created by God. Healthy nations can only appear if the people have healthy families. True families refer to families that have formed centred on God's true love. The family is meant to be the textbook from which you can learn the love of the universe. The greatest problem is the breakdown of the family. A healthy and nurturing family environment is necessary for the development of mental health in children. A positive atmosphere within the family, such as open communication, strong interpersonal relationships between parents and children, harmony and cohesion, contributes to a conducive and a safe space for children to develop healthy habits. Children who grow up in dysfunctional families are at risk of developing mental illness, which, if not treated, can result in long-term mental health problems such as depression and anxiety. Children who are exposed to constant conflict, aggression, abuse, neglect, domestic violence and separation because of divorce or parents who work long hours away from home are likely to present with behavioural and emotional problems. Parents, whether single, married or divorced, have got the responsibility to protect their *children's mental health. The Impact of Dysfunctional Families on the Mental Health of Children. Written by Lucy Kganayo Mphaphuli

For Almighty God to come again into the centre of our nations it is vital that righteous Godly men and women are elected into the different Parliaments, and that the leaders of the main political parties in particular are spiritually orientated. Enormous damage has been caused by secular, humanistic, anti-Godly policies such as extreme abortion and divorce laws, and the deliberate refusal to accept that children do much better when brought up by married couples. Children raised in intact married families are more likely to attend college, are physically and emotionally healthier, are less likely to be physically or sexually abused, less likely to use drugs or alcohol and to commit delinquent behaviours, have a decreased risk of divorcing when they get married, are less likely to become pregnant/impregnate someone as a teenager, and are less likely to be raised in poverty ("Why Marriage Matters: 26 Conclusions from the Social Sciences," Bradford Wilcox, Institute for American Values, www.americanvalues.org/html/r-wmm.html). With national elections taking place in the UK and USA in 2024, it is vital that politicians standing for election are asked about their views on family issues, as well as other key moral issues such as abortion and the LGBT agenda, especially in regard to protecting children in schools from being sexualised and encouraged to mutilate their bodies through the pernicious transgender ideology. In the UK successive governments have ignored empirical evidence, and have failed to protect traditional family values and have espoused the blatant lie that all family formations, such as single parents, LGBT families etc., all have the same value. The time is long overdue for politicians to face the facts that these so-called progressive, modern, secular, humanistic, anti-family, anti-Godly policies and legislation on key moral, family issues have been a disaster, and they absolutely need holding to account for this. This is why it is crucial that religious people are at the forefront in challenging the politicians; those already elected and those that will be standing for election. Religious leaders in particular should be mobilising all their congregations to be active in holding the politicians to account. If the religious people do not act as the conscience of their nations who else will defend moral, family and spiritual values? Repentance, prayer and human responsibility are key components in the quest for the peaceful ideal world that we all long to see. St. Augustine: Pray as though everything depended on God. Act as though everything depended on you. 2 Chronicles 7:14: If my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and I will forgive their sin and will heal their land. Isaiah 41:10. Fear not, for I am with you; be not dismayed, for I am your God; I will strengthen you, I will help you, I will uphold you with my righteous right hand.

Bruno Klotz sends out a weekly spiritually inspiring email to people on his email list. Excerpts: In the world designed by God, there is true love everywhere, in every relationship, on all levels. There is no evil and there are no conflicts, because nobody has a fallen nature. Everyone resonates with the loving heart of God and wants to be a blessing for others, always, unchangingly. That is what the 3 great Blessings are all about. However, because the first human ancestors listened to Satan rather than to God, they allowed themselves to get corrupted to the very core of their being. Their lineage changed to the lineage of Satan. Their corruption, as a result, got inherited by their descendants up to this day. And the whole world got corrupted to the core. These days people try to improve

Bishop Strickland: Human value comes from being made in God's image and likeness

Bishop Joseph Strickland

LifeSiteNews) — Bishop Joseph Strickland of Tyler, Texas, offers commentary on his fourth pastoral letter, in which he discusses the value of the human person, on this week's episode of The Bishop Strickland Show's. Strickland, looking at the value of the human person, says it comes from the fact that man is made in the image and likeness of God, something affirmed by the Catechism of the Catholic Church and by Sacred Scripture.

Reflecting on this value, Strickland observes that as man is made in God's image, he is different from all other creatures we know and gives man a certain responsibility for caring for creation. While man is indeed responsible for caring for creation, however, His Excellency stresses that man is the "pinnacle" of creation, as "we're the part of creation that most shines the light that is God in the world," a fact that he insists should be remembered for every person. "There's so many people hurting in our big cities or anywhere in our society because they don't know who they are," Strickland observes. "They don't know they're sacred. Then the way they treat the other person is less than sacred because they don't consider themselves sacred. So... it's a vicious cycle of hatred and division that flows when we don't know who we are." "We are the children of God," Strickland declares. In his pastoral letter, His Excellency applies the principle to gender confusion, writing that identifying with a gender other than our biological one is rooted in the denial of God's sovereignty, and "is demonstrated in dramatic ways as we begin to lose the thread of who we are." Commenting on the passage, Strickland says that to deny God is to deny ourselves. "If we're created in the image and likeness of God, when we forsake God, then what is our image and likeness?... What is the prototype of the human being?" he asks. "We lose that basic truth about ourselves when we deny who God is. We've got to turn to God to understand who we are because we're created in His image and likeness." Turning his attention towards those usually forgotten by society, Strickland maintains that those "devalued" by modern society are, for multiple reasons, "some of the most valuable" because they show us the true worth of the human person, and that God made us so that we could "flourish in His life and grace." "When we say there is no God or decide that we can reshape everything that God has revealed to us, we're really on a dangerous path," he warns. "Collectively, humanity is on that path right now."

Top UK journalist Andrew Neil joins the fight against gender ideology

Andrew Neil

answer to this, this movement has told us, is to free these trapped, invisible boys and girls with drugs, hormones, and surgical tools. Young people must go under the knife to become their true selves, and those who oppose this are pushing kids to kill themselves. It is a potent narrative. Now, the de-transitioners are coming forward with a different story. Their story is one of adolescent confusion hastily diagnosed by medical ideologues as "gender dysphoria," and suffering often irreversible physical, mental, and sexual damage as a result. Their testimonies of scarred chests and shattered lives are heartbreaking to hear – but despite attempts by the LGBT movement and their press propaganda arm to ignore or discredit them, their voices are getting louder. They are changing minds. The latest to respond to these stories is famed Scottish journalist and broadcaster Andrew Neil, chairman of The Spectator and host of Channel 4's Andrew Neil Show. On July 28, he posted a video of de-transitioner Chloe Cole testifying about her experience to lawmakers: Heartbreaking. Barbaric. Accurate words, but powerful coming from one of the U.K.'s most respected journalists. On August 1, Neil followed up with a column in the Daily Mail titled "Why I'm proud to be a 'TERF' and join JK Rowling on the front line in the gender wars," in which he detailed his change of mind on the subject: It all started innocently enough. I watched the testimony of a 19-year-old Californian, Chloe Cole, before a committee of the U.S. Congress last Thursday. She was giving evidence about the experience she underwent in her transition to becoming a boy and it was pretty harrowing stuff. Chloe revealed she had been given puberty blockers aged 13 and underwent a double mastectomy aged 15. Now de-transitioning, she fought back the tears as she revealed to the politicians before her that she had scars on her breast, her nipples wept fluids, she would never be able to breastfeed, she struggled to look at herself in the mirror and when she did she saw a 'monster.' I fought to hold back my own tears. Why had her parents gone along with all this? The doctors prescribing the drugs and proposing the mutilation, she explained, had asked them if they wanted a 'dead daughter' or a 'live trans son.' His tweet, Neil wrote, triggered a "baptism of fire" into the transgender debate, which he'd never commented on before publicly. The smears came in. A Tory cabinet minister texted him: "Welcome to the dark side." (Which is to say, the light side – or at least the right side.) Neil then experienced firsthand the torrent of abuse any public figure receives for bucking transgender orthodoxy – abuse that other "TERFs" – Trans Exclusionary Radical Feminists" – have been getting in spades for years. Women began sharing their own experiences being targeted by trans activists with him: One woman showed me evidence of threats to 'come to your house' and 'rip the nipples off your bare chest.' Another was promised a 'night of the long knives.' And there's much worse than this. It's simply unrepeatable in a newspaper. Neil began digging into the issue further, noting that critics of the transgender movement have often paid dearly and professionally for speaking out. "These injustices happened under my nose. Either I took no notice, or didn't think it was my fight – when it should be everybody's fight," he wrote. "Of course, journalists like me were not entirely unaware of transgender controversies. We watched, shaking our heads, as men who had transitioned to women started winning events in women's sports." But Neil, like most others, ignored the issue. Now, he noted, he has begun his research and is joining the fray. "If this analysis proves broadly right, we're living through a medical and societal scandal of massive proportions," he observed. "I'm ready for the further abuse that awaits me for siding with such company. Frankly, it's water off a duck's back. And it's never as brutal against men as it is women, which speaks volumes for those dishing out the abuse.” Neil is a formidable journalist and debater, and I look forward to seeing him array his fierce talents in this fight. Once again, Chloe Cole’s story has made a difference.

International Leadership Conference (ILC) Cambodia

On July 22nd, Cambodia’s Sokha Phnom Penh Hotel played host to the International Leadership Conference (ILC) centred around “Peace and Democracy”. This prestigious event, co-organized by the Universal Peace Federation (UPF) and the Cambodia Asia Vision Institute, was graced by over 250 international participants, including seven notable heads of state. The Cambodian government-backed opening ceremony was broadcasted in four languages: English, Korean, Spanish, and French. Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, UPF’s co-founder, shared a powerful message: “At 2019’s Nagoya conference, we introduced the Asia-Pacific Union vision. I urge Asian nations to join hands, transcend national interests, and collaboratively pursue a peaceful, heavenly world. It’s time we lead the dawn of the Asia-Pacific: Opening remarks: Dr. Charles S. Yang, Chairman, Universal Peace Federation International: Currently, conflicts and civil wars occur in at least 27 places throughout the world, according to the Council on Foreign Relations’ Global Conflict Tracker. Even with UN involvement, these problems cannot be resolved. A prime example is the war between Russia and Ukraine, which the UN has been unable to stop. Almost 10 million people have left their homes and are suffering due to this war. The same can be said for Syria and Venezuela. Globally, as many as 95 million people have lost their homes and are wandering as refugees. Conflicts between religions, ideologies, and races are the main causes of civil wars and regional conflicts. As UPF Co-Founders Rev. and Dr. Moon teach that conflict and evil started at the very beginning of human history. Our first human ancestors violated the fundamental principle of goodness. Instead of living for the sake of others, they created selfishness within individuals, families, races, and nations. Knowing the Creator, our Heavenly Parent, is the beginning of peace, Father and Mother Moon have advocated three guidelines that educational institutions should establish to nurture future leaders. These are: love God, love humanity, and love your country. First, to “love God” starts with honouring your parents. This creates a heart of filial piety in children and they naturally develop a character of goodness. Second, “love humanity” means to love people by loving your neighbours as your own brothers or sisters. When we all love each other like this, there will be more compassion and less conflict or war. Third, “love your country” means to live for something greater than self-serving material interests. Individuals live for families; families for the well-being of the nation; and nations for global peace. This is the world of goodness we all desire. The Universal Peace Federation advocates believe that the path to a peaceful world in our time is based on the principles of interdependence, mutual prosperity, and universally shared values.

Pro-freedom lawyer: Million Person March gives me hope Canada can turn tide on ‘authoritarian dystopia’

Fri Sep 22, 2023 - 5:41 pm EDT (LifeSiteNews) — Pro-freedom lawyer James Kitchen said the massive turnout nationwide for Wednesday’s Million Person March made him more hopeful and “less pessimistic” about Canada going further down the path of an “authoritarian dystopia.” “I’m known in the Canadian freedom movement for being somewhat pessimistic,” Kitchen said in a post to X (formerly Twitter) on Wednesday. “But I’ll say, after seeing the number of people that have come out today in support of parental rights and in opposition to the left-wing policies of indoctrinating and sexualizing children, I am less pessimistic about Canada reversing the trend toward a soul-crushing authoritarian dystopia.” On Wednesday, thousands of concerned Canadian parents, kids, and others from coast to coast participated in the Million Person March against LGBT indoctrination in the nation’s schools. The protest was organized by Muslim Canadians and used the slogan “Leave our kids alone,” specifically regarding gender ideology, age-inappropriate sexual content in school libraries, and LGBT propaganda. The marches in most Canadian cities were peaceful. However, there were some reports of assaults on protesters by LGBT-aligning counter-protesters. In additional comments yesterday on X (formerly Twitter), Kitchen said the “grip of the LGBT ideology upon Canada is weakening.” “Why? Because enough people have finally realized that it is not tolerance and equality they want, it is censorship of all opposition and control, particularly control of government and children,” he said. Kitchen also noted that for “far too long” Canadians have lived in “fear of the left-wing LGBT mob.” “Today, many have cast off that fear and rejected self-censorship in favour of making their voice heard regarding parental rights and protecting children from destructive sexual ideologies,” he said. Kitchen has been helping Canadian high school student Josh Alexander in his case against his school board, with the assistance of Liberty Coalition Canada. Alexander was banned from attending school for saying there are only two genders. He has spoken out before against government overreach concerning COVID mandates in comments to LifeSiteNews. He has also been fighting COVID-related cases for the past few years. Alexander attended the Million Person March. Today, social media was abuzz with video showing Alexander’s brother, Nick, with a bloody face after allegedly getting punched in the face by a pro-trans protester at pro-family rally outside a Toronto school.

GOVERNMENT TO BE SUED OVER RSE LESSONS!

The Bad Law Project is attempting to sue the UK Department for Education for negligence on the grounds that it has failed to protect children. Dr Anna Loufti, Head of Legal at the Bad Law Project, claims PSHE (Personal, Social, Health, and Education Education) lessons are unlawful and are criminal, and says that what is going on in these lessons is “child abuse – mental, physical and sexual. It is child exploitation, and it is child indoctrination”. The Bad Law Project contends that PSHE “is not just poorly taught, or badly overseen, or misguided, or in need of revision or reform, it is unlawful and possibly criminal, and it must be abolished”. It is currently preparing a class action suit to be brought by 10 parents who claim their children were encouraged at school to socially and medically gender transition, and the teachers even “kept their children’s gender switches a secret” from them. Dr Loufti claims that this was “at considerable cost to both the children and their families’ mental and physical wellbeing”. Dr Loufti condemns the pushing of “gender ideology” in schools, which has been facilitated by the DfE, contending that since gender reassignment is something that is currently lawfully only available for adults, it should not even be discussed with minors. The category of “gender reassignment”, which is a

TRUE FAMILY VALUES MINISTRY

Sharing Blessings with Others

D. This is the higher purpose of all families: to be in service of neighbors and relatives, one's hometown.

1. Every individual and every family should be in partnership with God and each other.

2. Avoid family-centered life, which is a form of selfishness.

- Do not just think that your home is your castle.
- Do not favor your own relatives (nepotism).
- In fact, we should work first for the benefit of other families, not our own. This is the practice of patriotism, sainthood and holiness.
- Beware of hoarding your blessings! Such families lose their heavenly fortune.

3. Hospitality: a traditional virtue.

- Taking in orphans and raising them as one's own.
- Helping poorer relations.
- Kindness to strangers, especially those in need.

4. Voluntarism: helping the community.

- Charity, philanthropy.
- Tithing time and money.
- The CEO of a major corporation coaches a local children's soccer team, or works in a soup kitchen.

5. Leadership: becoming a center of the community through active service. The person who sacrifices for others will attract others' support and confidence.

6. The family which extends itself to others also expands itself.

- Its members have varied experiences with different kinds of people.
- It experiences expanding love for others.
- It experiences more of God's love.
- It finds purpose and unity in serving God together.

What is Heaven's Blessing?

A. The blessings of Heaven.

1. Blessings are founded in God's true love, His absolute living for the sake of His children.

2. God's children can inherit them through making their own effort in the same direction of true love.

3. There are three categories of God's blessing (Gen. 1:28).

- He blesses us with perfected individuality (a mature, fruitful personality).
- He blesses us with an eternal marriage and wholesome family life.
- He blesses us with a secure, pleasant and abundant environment, physically and spiritually.

4. By striving daily to put the spiritual world above the physical, we can mature our personalities to become complete (living for the sake of others). When Jesus said that "you must be perfect" (Matt. 5:48), the Greek term for perfect means to reach maturity or completion. On that basis, God can bless us as His fruitful sons and daughters. This is the first blessing.

5. We then can receive God's second blessing, that of perfected marriage and family life.

6. This second blessing is the original family ideal. Adam and Eve did not achieve it, because they did not reach individual maturity, the first blessing. Hence this ideal must be recovered.

B. Recovery of the original family ideal through the Blessing of marriage.

1. In 1960, Reverend and Mrs. Sun Myung Moon established the first marriage completely free of sin, for the sake of granting this Blessing to all marriages.

2. They are called by God to grant the Blessing upon the marriages of all humankind. Hundreds of thousands of people around the world have received their Blessing.

3. Many are members of the Unification Church. Many are not; they belong to every religious faith.

4. The Blessing opens up a realm of life never before attained, the realm of the true family.

- To participate in the Blessing is an act of love based upon faith. Our faith is that God is working in and through Reverend and Mrs. Moon and that their ministry of Blessing is a culminating step for all religions. Therefore, people of all religions are invited to receive the Blessing.
- The Blessing draws a man and woman as a married couple into the realm of God's holiness.
 - Although individuals could aspire to holiness through religion in the past, it was only as individuals.
 - It was never before available to married couples in their lives together, in their conjugal union.
 - Hence it was never possible to multiply God's Blessing to the children within the family.
- By participating in the Blessing, the path to spiritual completion as parents is open.
 - By co-creating our children with God, and rearing them with God, we share God's ultimate heart of a parent. Thus we can fulfill the image of God, as a couple and family.
 - Through the Blessing, and our life to give God's blessings to others, our home becomes God's dwelling place (Rev. 21:3: "Behold, the dwelling of God is with men. He will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself will be with them").

5. The Blessing opens the door to become a True Family.

- The Blessing comes from Reverend and Mrs. Moon, on the foundation of the Old Testament and New Testament, having expelled Satan and inherited God's love, life and lineage.
- By living according to the true family values, based on the Blessing, all couples can inherit this liberation from selfishness, and inherit God's love, life and family lineage.

“protected characteristic” under the Equality Act 2010, has been misleadingly confused with “gender identity”. Dr Loufti claims the Department for Education has ignored the many complaints from parents that gender ideology is causing their children great harm; and has allowed schools, local authorities and charities to indoctrinate children with this destructive ideology. The parents who are taking the legal action are having to remain anonymous for their own safety, which Dr Loufti claims is a consequence of the “pathetic state of free speech in this so-called democracy”. The Bad Law Project’s second argument is that the Department for Education has ignored the sexual exploitation of children, since schools have increasingly been sexualising children through, for instance, teaching them about exploring their intimate body parts and masturbation. Teaching resources used in schools clearly “encourage sexual arousal, stimulation and pleasure” in children. An article published recently by ParentPower covers examples of such materials. New evidence of schools using horrifying sex-ed resources on our children. Dr Loufti further explains that “even though technically PSHE is legally mandated, as practised, it is against the good laws of this country, laws that exist to protect children and uphold the child’s and the parent’s right to a family life, which is protected under article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights”. She further claims that the Department for Education has “failed to uphold its duty of care towards children in schools, a duty that is rooted in its public law powers. It has failed to prevent political indoctrination, in breach of the Education Act of 1996”. The Bad Law Project is calling for the complete abolition of PSHE on the grounds that it is primarily being used to indoctrinate and abuse children. Encouragingly the story has gained coverage in the national press, including the Daily Mail — see Parents of trans pupils plan to sue the government | Daily Mail Online. We fully support this legal action and wish every success to The Bad Law Project, the parents taking this suit and their children (the PSHE victims) as they fight for justice. The Bad Law Project are seeking financial support for their campaign, having a target of £125,000 to raise, of which they have so far raised £51,000. They also need parents to sign their petition – Asleep At The Wheel (democracythree.org) This article is published by permission of ParentPower.

“Contributions to a global Culture of Peace”

Abridged: Commemorating the UN International Day of Peace, Universal Peace Federation Burgenland, an Austrian region located on the eastern part of the country, organised on September 10th, 2023 a peace conference in cooperation with the Coalition of Faith Based Organizations with the theme “Contributions to a global Culture of Peace”. This conference took place in the premises of the Schlaining Peace Castle and it was moderated by Mr. Johann Rechberger, the president of UPF Burgenland. In his opening remarks Mr. Rechberger noted that: “The year 2000 was declared the ‘International Year of a Culture of Peace’ in a resolution of the United Nations General Assembly. The General Assembly, recalling the aims and principles of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organizations, states that peace does not only mean the absence of conflict, but that it also requires a positive dynamic and participatory process, within which dialogue is encouraged and conflicts are to be resolved in a spirit of mutual understanding and cooperation”. Prof. Dr. Titus Leber started with stating that peace arises from finding common ground while transcending boundaries. During the last 25 years he was involved in multimedia presentation of cultural and religious contents. Some of his projects were documentaries of World Culture Heritage sites under the protectorate of UNESCO like the Borobudur in Indonesia. His latest project is “Africa interactive” which uses state of the art technology to gather and disseminate compact information of Africa’s vast cultural heritage and to make this information accessible via smart media to young Africans, thus enabling them to appreciate Africa’s contribution to the world’s cultural patrimony. He also suggested to be concerned about the spiritual or mental pollution of our environment that takes place through the media and was even heavily criticized for it. The display of violence leads to excesses. He suggested at the European Cultural Parliament to put heavy taxation upon media producers who propagate violence for the sake of violence. Ms. Tatjana Christelbauer said that UNESCO understands the culture of peace as the everyday way of thinking, behaving and living of individuals and society. It is based on respect for human rights, participation, dialogue and cooperation. The culture of peace fundamentally excludes violence as a means of conflict resolution. She spoke about Feminist approaches to the culture of peace and quoted Rosa Mayreder (1858-1938), an Austrian musician, composer, cultural philosopher and gender and peace researcher who said "Humanity can achieve lasting peace only when 'feminine qualities' are actively incorporated into the political and social order of society."

Prof. Dr. Elmar Kuhn emphasised in his address that it is high time to finally develop narratives of peace, which are based on truth and that religious institutions in particular could develop such narratives and implement them in education. To achieve this, religions and ultimately each of us would have to become more visible again in society. There will be no peace in the world without the contribution of Faith-based organizations, even if our secularized Europe tries to banish God from politics and society as much as possible. Dr. Leo Gabriel recalled the danger of the nuclear threat, which has become even greater as a result of the war in Ukraine, stating that: “Peace is the most important issue in the world today”. He spoke about the discussions in the World Social Forum, where he has been active for decades and among others mentioned that the peace movement must also learn and connect the issue of peace with the climate and environment topics as well as social justice. He concluded by saying that we need a convergence of movements, because together we are strong. Mr. Peter Haider started by quoting Paramahansa Prajnanananda, an Indian yoga master, who said in a recent UPF Conference: "Peace is the absence of ruthlessness, hatred, jealousy, conflict, contradiction, and chaos, and the prevalence of cooperation, serenity, mutual understanding, and the manifestation of help and care for one another." He said that family is the only institution that God has created and it is sustaining humanity. It is the school of love where people can learn how to love each other and live together in peace. It is like a base camp for world peace. He also quoted UPF founder Dr. Sun Myung Moon "The problem is how to end the troubled conflict within ourselves. My first motto when I started this path was, 'Control yourself before you try to control the universe.' If you can't control yourself, you can't control the world." "Why must we continue this path that is causing so much suffering, wasting countless dollars on wars that in the end will never lead to reconciliation between enemies? The time has come for all countries in this world to use their resources to build a world of peace." The conference concluded with a lunch in the gardens inside the castle, where everyone enjoyed the sunny weather of a very warm late summer day. Ms. Ruiko Friesacher, a loyal participant in the UPF peace conferences at Schlaining Castle, folded 2,400 cranes during the pandemics as a symbol of healing the world and world peace. All conference participants were invited to take one of these cranes home with them. Report written by Johann Rechberger and Peter Haider

NO MORE NUCLEAR WEAPONS: WFWPI ATTENDS THE NPT CONFERENCE IN VIENNA

Written by: Renate Amesbauer

On August 1, 2023, the Women's Federation for World Peace International Office for UN Relations in Vienna participated in the first session of the Preparatory Committee for the 2026 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) at the Vienna International Centre. It was chaired by Ambassador Jarmo Viinanen from Finland. The Committee opened with statements of 16 NGOs and NGO networks, which took around two hours! Statements of Member States or groups of Member States followed. During lunchtime Side Events and various working groups were offered. WFWPI endorsed a Joint Statement to the 2023 Preparatory Committee for the 11th NPT Review Conference, which was initiated by the Basel Peace Office, UNFOLD ZERO, World Future Council and World Federalist Movement, together with 152 organizations and 32 countries. The title of the statement was "Common Security and Nuclear Deterrence: How to replace the current reliance on nuclear weapons with sustainable security for all." There were specific areas of particular interest to WFWPI representatives, such as a paragraph about alternative methods to ensure common security and the intention to invest more in developing these methods of conflict resolution through mediation, peace building and many other points. This aligns with WFWPI's values of leading with a parental heart, promoting mutual prosperity and universal values. In the course of the Commission the attendees were also made aware of the devastating effects of a nuclear war on several occasions, using the example of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. However, nuclear weapons today have a much greater – and more disastrous – effect than those used in 1945. So, whoever starts using it against his enemy, the effect will be almost the same on both parties, and in fact on everyone, even those not involved in the conflict. More information can be found on the NPT website. A number of side events of the conference dealt with the effect of nuclear testing on the health of people: a heightened risk of cancer, higher numbers of babies born with deficiencies and disabilities and the destruction of nature, which is the source of income and nutrition for the local population. It was also explained that nuclear testing is often done in secrecy, ignoring the rights of people living in the area who are most affected. In conclusion, recommendations were given by the Chair of the first session of the Preparatory Committee for potential areas of focused discussion at the second session of the Preparatory Committee for the 2026 Review Conference. Representatives of WFWPI were glad they could attend the conference. They learned a lot about the aspect of peaceful use of NCL Technology, but also gained a deeper understanding of the hindrances concerning nuclear non-proliferation. WFWPI hopes that this process develops much faster into a good direction, fostering a world of peace and prosperity for all. The WFWPI Office for UN Relations in Vienna will explore possibilities to contribute to this goal even more.

Following MassResistance efforts there, Kyrgyzstan passes strong law protecting children from LGBT propaganda

September 19, 2023: Here is an international story that we're happy to report, in contrast to all the negative news from around the world. Kyrgyzstan is a country in Central

This prominent podcaster in Kazakhstan featured MassResistance's message. Her audience was shocked at what they learned.

Asia located between China and Kazakhstan. It was part of the USSR before declaring its independence in 1991. It is approximately 90% Muslim and very conservative on family issues. The LGBT agenda pushed in by foreign money: Starting in 2019, Kyrgyzstan's pro-family movement began protesting the LGBT agenda coming into their country. It was being pushed through foreign NGOs (non-governmental organizations) and foreign non-profits. The Kyrgyzstan government was simply allowing it to happen, and people were outraged. MassResistance joins the fight: As we reported, in December 2022, the Kyrgyzstan pro-family movement became aware of a U.S. State Department grant to a Kyrgyzstan LGBT organization with broad plans to promote the normalization of homosexuality and transgenderism and to transform the country's culture. The pro-family people were shocked and incensed at this. They reached out to MassResistance for help. It was decided to communicate a strong message against this to the top government officials – to halt this funding and its agenda. Since they knew some members of the Parliament, it was decided to create a video which would be presented to the Kyrgyzstan president, Sadyr Japarov. They asked Arthur Schaper, our Field Director at MassResistance, to create the video message. They felt that since Arthur is an American, he would have more credibility in imploring them to counter the U.S. State Department's actions. In February 2023, Arthur made the video. They quickly translated it into the Kyrgyz language and began sending it to their allies in the government and fellow pro-family activists. The message spreads! Over the next few months, the MassResistance video made a huge splash across Kyrgyzstan and other countries in Central Asia. As we reported, on March 14, a prominent podcaster in the neighboring country Kazakhstan featured MassResistance's message, then a few weeks later she interviewed Arthur on her show. On March 28, a professor of the Russian Academy of Natural Sciences published an article on a Kyrgyzstan site reacting to Arthur's warning. The video's message was also covered on several Central Asian news sites, and even a prominent Russian web magazine. This prominent podcaster in Kazakhstan featured MassResistance's message. Her audience was shocked at what they learned. The government responds – and passes a landmark child protection bill! The video also made a big splash politically: The Kyrgyzstan activists sent it to nearly every government official. And they demanded some action. As a result, legislators began taking a stand to stop LGBT funding from coming into the country! But the real problem wasn't just the funding grants coming in. It seemed as if there was a Western-based LGBT propaganda war targeting the country's children coming from all angles: books, social media, Big Tech, the leftwing media, and local "gay" organizations. But with the relentless work by the activists, the politicians were finally being forced to recognize that. In June came a huge breakthrough. A strong bill protecting children from LGBT propaganda and other destructive agendas made its way through the Parliament and was passed on June 22. All that needed to happen was for the President to sign it. In particular, the bill attacks a mainstay of the LGBT agenda. It bans "denying family and traditional social values, promoting non-traditional sexual relations and forming disrespect for parents or other family members." Moreover, it broadly applies to media and even social media. Not surprisingly, as soon as it passed in Parliament, the leftist media in the region immediately started attacking the bill, saying it was “a crude effort at censorship” and an attempt to stop children’s “access to information.” They complained it is intended to “marginalize minority communities.” They urged the President not to sign it. But on August 15, our Kyrgyzstan MassResistance leader emailed us with the exciting news: Our team has succeeded in passing the law. Yesterday Sadyr Japarov, the President of Kyrgyzstan signed a law aimed at banning propaganda of non-traditional sexual relations in the country. The new law amends existing legislation to create a safer information environment and protect children and adolescents. This includes a ban on the dissemination of information that denies family and traditional values in the media. Violators will be held liable in accordance with the Kyrgyz Code of Offenses. According to press reports, the country intends to work with Facebook and other Big Tech companies to ensure their compliance with the law. The day after the President signed it into law, a prominent pro-family magazine in Krgyzstan sent out this in-your-face graphic responding to the leftist media: A second video for Central Asia from MassResistance! The day after the President signed the bill into law, our Kyrgyzstan MassResistance leader contacted us with this request: Could you film a video presentation about the importance of the pro-family agenda in Kyrgyzstan and send your video to me? We will translate it into the Russian and Kyrgyz languages. Afterwards we will disseminate this video among the Russian communities on social media. So Arthur got right to work and created another short video with a strong message of congratulations to the people of Kyrgyzstan – and urging pro-family activists to expand their great work around Central Asia. We are looking for more great pro-family action in that part of the world! Final thoughts: Our Kyrgyzstan leader noted this was a very courageous act by the Kyrgyzstan politicians. He told us that most of the Kyrgyz official authorities have felt they are dependent on accepting the Western LGBT agenda because of the overall financial aid from the West – and they are afraid of sanctions. That’s why no one from the Kyrgyz government and Kyrgyz Parliament has, until now, supported or financed any pro-life or pro-family projects. But this time the pressure to protect children won! It’s a great victory.

English bishop calls for renewal of ‘Christian vocation of marriage’ as invitation to ‘holiness’

Bishop Mark Davies

October 20th, 2023, CHESTER, England (LifeSiteNews) — An English bishop has warned that marriage is not just in “decline” but risks “disappearing” and urged a renewal of the Christian vocation of marriage as a “call to holiness.” Speaking in Chester on October 14, Bishop Mark Davies of the Diocese of Shrewsbury issued an impassioned plea for a resurgence of the sacrament of marriage. Speaking at the diocesan Mass celebrated particularly for married couples, Davies warned of a societal collapse due to low marriage rates. “The headlines do not seem to exaggerate when they speak not merely of a cataclysmic decline but of marriage disappearing in Britain,” he said. “The social consequences of such a loss are only beginning to be worked out, not least for the well-being of children.” He noted that for those present, celebrating many decades of married life, when they entered into the sacrament “marriage might have seemed the most natural step in the world for a young couple setting out in life and ready to begin a family.” “The promises you made were not merely recognized by British society as the most vital of its institutions and the greatest of social goods, this was a commitment in which society uniquely promised to support you in numerous ways,” he observed. But such a time of societal support for marriage is no longer the case, Davies added. Addressing the jubilarians in his homily, the bishop stated: It is hard to imagine in little more than half a century the promises you made, the vocation you embraced would become more and more exceptional. So exceptional in these early years of this 21st Century that most recent statistics show a 61% decrease of marriages in our land; the lowest number of couples entering marriage for almost two centuries; and the first time in our history that more children are born outside of marriage than in a married home. Davies urged Catholics not simply “to lament such a loss but to allow the Christian vision of marriage to be seen anew as a radical call to holiness, really the same thing as happiness.”

Davies called for a renewal of the sacrament of marriage in light of widespread marital and familial breakdown. This would entail proposing marriage “as it came from the hand of our Creator as the faithful, lasting union of man and woman open to the gift and responsibility of children (Cf. Catechism of the Catholic Church No. 1603).” The bishop added that Catholic marriage was founded on a calling more than a simple union of two individuals: To declare our faith in marriage as a Divine calling, lived out in human relationships which bear the disorder and frailties of sin, yet with the promise of unfailing grace and the hope of salvation. Davies argued that the daily witness of sacramental marriages must serve as an “invitation to new generations to believe and set out along the same path.” In this way, he added, families would grow, children would become more numerous, and the Scriptural calling of marriage centered on God would once again be prevalent: The Christian vocation of marriage stands out as an invitation to new generations to believe and set out along the same path; to have the courage to make the same awesome promises; to build a stable and loving home for their children by their very faithfulness; and with the same prayer that the Lord may protect their unity of heart and bring them to old age together (Cf. Tobit 8:8). To this with Tobias and Sarah we can surely say “Amen, amen.” Bishop Davies has a history of speaking out on issues pertaining to Catholic morality, especially regarding topics on family life and the unborn. In this light, he has been vocal in defending the Catholic teaching on issues such as the reception of Holy Communion, marriage and family life, and gender ideology.

UK study shows fathers can help their children achieve in school by spending time with them

Oct. 11th 2023 (LifeSiteNews) – A British study shows that fathers’ involvement has a positive influence on their children’s school achievement regardless of the child’s sex, ethnicity, age in the school year, and household name. Research carried out at the University of Leeds has found that fathers can give their children an educational advantage at primary school by reading, singing, drawing, and playing with them on a regular basis, according to the U.K. study published on September 20. The father-focused study was funded by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) and led by Dr. Helen Norman, Research Fellow at Leeds University Business School, in collaboration with co-author Dr. Jeremy Davies, Head of Impact and Communications at the Fatherhood Institute, and co-investigators at the University of Manchester. The longitudinal analysis in England explored the relationship between fathers’ childcare involvement and their children’s attainment at primary school.

Analyzing primary school test scores for five-, seven-, and eleven-year-olds, the researchers used a representative sample of nearly 5,000 mother-father households in England from the Millennium Cohort Study (MCS). The MCS collected data on children born in 2000-02. Quoted on the UK Data Service website, Professor Emla Fitzsimons, director of the MCS, said, "The Millennium Cohort Study has been tracking the lives of thousands of people since they were babies and is uniquely placed to help researchers better understand Gen Z and the influences on different spheres of their lives now, including their mental and physical health, their intellectual development, and relationships." Dr. Helen Norman said, "Mothers still tend to assume the primary carer role and therefore tend to do the most childcare, but if fathers actively engage in childcare too, it significantly increases the likelihood of children getting better grades in primary school. This is why encouraging and supporting fathers to share childcare with the mother, from an early stage in the child's life, is critical. Dads' involvement impacted positively on their children's school achievement regardless of the child's gender, ethnicity, age in the school year and household income." "Our analysis has shown that fathers have an important, direct impact on their children's learning. We should be recognizing this and actively finding ways to support dads to play their part, rather than engaging only with mothers, or taking a gender-neutral approach," said Dr. Jeremy Davies. According to data from the UK Office of National Statistics (ONS), "one in nine [fathers] report their job as being a stay-at-home dad – a rise of 34 per cent in just three years." In a similar study in Japan, researchers from Doshisha University and Kyoto University found that children with highly involved fathers had a lower risk of developmental delays and thus fathers positively influenced a child's physical and cognitive development. The findings, published in Pediatric Research on July 8, this world by all kinds of means, political, military, scientific and all kinds of other means. But all this is not the solution: We, too, are destined to spread true love everywhere we go, until this world is filled with it completely, everywhere and on all levels. We are called to make a huge contribution to the healing of this world, by being a blessing to others, by spreading God's love and blessing: Indeed, we need to teach the world about the importance of true love and what true love really means: We are honoured to participate in the revolution of love, God's own revolution, the revolution of true love.

On 2nd September, John O'Neill participated in the annual "March for Life" in London. Police estimated that 7,000 pro-life attendees of all ages, including a large contingent of youth, filled Parliament Square on Saturday to "March for Life". Key messages expressed by participants highlighted support for more care for mothers and babies, and opposition to the decriminalisation of abortion.

Noemi Horvath forwarded on WhatsApp a petition to stop abortion up-to-birth from being legalised in the UK.

John O'Neill continues to speak at different churches about key moral family issues. At a church in East Ham on September 9th, John was asked to speak to the youth section of the church. John highlighted about the purpose of life, living for the sake of others and becoming beings of true love. John was then invited to give a sermon at the church by one of the pastors. John was one of the speakers at a book launch by Mama Blessing of the Koinonia church, in Hornchurch on October 28th. John was also asked to offer the closing prayer.

END DIY ABORTION – JUSTICE FOR BABY LILY postcards from The Society for the Protection of Unborn Children are being distributed to numerous religious organisations and individual people. Other items from SPUC such as a petition: Stop UK Government funding China's genocidal regime are also being widely distributed. Information fact sheets, including the results of empirical studies concerning key moral, family issues continue to be sent to key relevant people such as MP's and journalists.

Letters and Emails Received

Thank you, John. At least the Scottish Nationalist Party and Scottish Labour Party have stopped short of legislating assisted suicide, so far. They have agreed to every form of LGBT and contemporary immorality otherwise over the years. If the Conservative and Unionist Party could take away their 'Union' label, they might get a far greater proportion of the traditionalist Scottish vote than they realise. Best wishes for your good work, and to your family also. Hamish

Dear John, Many thanks. [Summer Update] Keep up the good work. Cllr. John Nottingham (Dewsbury). Good afternoon John, Thank you for the Update [Summer edition]. Appreciate the work you are doing. Best regards, Dave Andrews.

Blessings John, I signed. [Petition against naked bike riding in public places] Please do what you can to stop this child-abusing behaviour of naked people. I will support you, GOD bless, Dr. Sheikh Ramzy Morning John, Thank you for getting in touch, and for watching. I am so sorry for the upset. Our internal guidelines remind our Producers and Presenters how distressing this kind of mis-use is for many listeners. [Offensive language] I have passed on your constructive comments to the production team and I hope you will notice an improvement. Thank you again for your valuable feedback, it is very much appreciated - good or bad. Sharna Johnson. Talk TV.

Thank you John, Yes, we have the same problem in Germany. If straight people would take off their clothes and expose themselves naked in public, they would be taken into custody right away. But when the LGBTQ and the Trans movement are parading naked and behaving in lewd manners on our streets even in front of families with children, they are being treated as a privileged class. This is how the Sodom and the Gomorrah lifestyle is being "normalized" in our society. The "Emperor's New Clothes" comes to my mind. Only a little boy honestly spoke up questioning what everyone was thinking but did not dare to express, afraid of being condemned by the mob. Keep up your good work. Alles Gute. Oivind.

Dear John, Thanks for being in touch with me following my article in the Mail. [NHS Strikes] We live in extremely difficult times. With the best wishes, David [Lord Blunkett].

Thanks John-we are united in our desire to stop this horrible practice. [Obscene singing and chanting at football games} Debbie. [Hewitt – Chairwoman, Football Association].

Dear John, Reading the Morality Forum Updates, I never cease to be impressed by your hard work and perseverance. All the best, Jacqueline.

2023, analyzed birth cohort data from the Japan Environment and Children's Study, an ongoing project examining how the environment impacts children's health. Out of a sample size of 28,050 children, the Japanese researchers looked at the level of a father's involvement in childcare when the children were six months old and the risk of developmental delays at the age of three years. According to Asian Scientist Magazine: "For all indicators tested, children with highly involved fathers were less likely to be developmentally delayed. These indicators included communication, social skills, and motor skills. The biggest difference was noticed in the case of gross motor skills which involves actions like jumping in place or pedalling a tricycle. This shows that the father-child relationship plays a significant role in physical development." "Our research findings indicate that increased paternal engagement in childcare could yield advantages for both children and mothers alike," said Tsuguhiko Kato, a public health researcher and the study's author. The research led by University of Leeds recommended that dads should carve out as much time as they can to engage in interactive activities with their children each week. For busy, working dads, even just ten minutes a day could potentially have educational benefits.

A lesson from history

By Hildegard Horie

(LifeSiteNews) Oct. 17th – Where can students learn history today? From whom can they learn it? We can read in the National Post that "weeding guidelines direct librarians to remove books that may have misinformation, are misleading, or reinforce racist content or information that is not gender affirming." Everything now is controlled by the LGBTQ "community" and woke warriors, eager to promote their gender philosophy, destroying the next generation. I grew up in Germany under Hitler. Even though I was a little child I still remember. Looking back, I see some similarities between Germany then and Canada today. Germany before Hitler: It was a difficult time in Germany; people needed hope. They still tried to recover from the lost war. They could not see a future. Then came Hitler. Nobody knew who he was. He promised Germans new life and a future. He captivated them with his speech. They saw in him their savior. They believed in him. He gave them hope. He became, in a sense, their god and they worshipped him and followed him. People greeted each other with raised arms: "Heil Hitler!" They trusted him. Those who opposed him were silenced. People did not know that Hitler was inspired and directed by the occult. Canada under Trudeau: Daily living has become more difficult. Unemployment, food shortages, daily fear mongering of the media about non-existent climate change, financial uncertainty.... Then the World Economic Forum came. Nobody voted them in. Suddenly they seem to control of much of the world thanks to their global "Great Reset." Satan seems to have showered global elites with riches. He has given his agents key positions in politics, science, economy, education, media, healthcare and the justice system. COVID was born, a welcome tool in the hands of the elite, who used mandatory injections of an experimental substance as their weapon to reach their goal of world control and reduce the world population. People were bombarded by the paid media with bad news about COVID, which could be easily treated, but good treatments were forbidden. Doctors who dared to inform their patients lost their licenses and were punished. Many doctors left the country. The healthcare system nearly broke down. Masks were obligatory. Church services closed while secular places were open. Christians were silenced, soon persecuted and imprisoned. Singing was not allowed; even prayer in the open sport field was forbidden. The government brutally ended a peaceful protest of hundreds of truckers against unjustified mandates. Bank accounts from those supporting the protest were frozen. The Charter protecting freedom of speech was ignored. The killings through experimental "vaccines," which also maimed or injured untold numbers of people worldwide, continued. Dr. Rainer Fuellmich called the coronavirus scandal the greatest crime against humanity ever committed. "Do we tolerate these people?": The 'unvaccinated' in Canada and Jews under Hitler: Jews in Hitler's Germany: The Nazis knew that if they told people the Jews were their enemies, taking away their business, causing all the misery – then people would start to hate what they hated and do what the Nazis told them to do. Jewish businesses were destroyed. Nobody was allowed to buy from Jews in Germany. They were shipped to concentration camps, gassed, murdered through injections – 6 million of them killed just for being Jews. Many tried to leave the country; some were able, others not. On June 7, 1939, the ship the St. Louis carrying 907 Jewish refugees trying to escape the persecution in Germany was denied entry into Canada. "None is too many..." The ship had to return. Two-hundred fifty-four of them died in the Holocaust in Germany. Years later, Trudeau stood in the House of Commons and apologized for the Mackenzie King government sending innocent people away to their death. "Never again" was like a holy promise. But what about increasing crimes against the Jewish population, which became the most frequent target of religiously motivated "hate" crimes in 2016? Was Trudeau allowing a repeat of what he had condemned? And then came the mandatory injections...and we could hear Trudeau calling those not willing to take the experimental injection of questionable ingredients a "fringe minority." The rhetoric about one particular group of people ramped up. "They are extremists who don't believe in science, they're often misogynists, also often racists," Trudeau claimed. "It's a small group that muscles in, and we have to make a choice in terms of leaders, in terms of the country: Do we tolerate these people?" Division and hate were sown. The "unvaccinated" in Canada became the Jews under Hitler. They were not allowed to travel freely or patronize certain restaurants or stores. They were not killed in concentration camps – although maybe the camps are already prepared for next time – but they were forcibly detained in "quarantine hotels."

'Unworthy life' in Hitler's Germany vs. 'unworthy life' in today's Canada: The Nazis saw people with disabilities as an obstacle in their goal to create an idealized "German race." In 1939, the Nazi regime began to systematically "cleanse" Germany from those not fit for the future of their paradise. The so-called Nazi Euthanasia Program murdered those with mental and physical disabilities. They were gassed in concentration camps or murdered through lethal injections by doctors. This program claimed the lives of an estimated 250,000 people. In Canada today, unborn babies are not welcome. Their humanity is denied. Abortion and euthanasia are legalized. Millions of babies have been killed in abortion, even after they were born, often their organs sold for profit. Euthanasia, euphemistically called "medical aid in dying" or MAID, is offered freely, replacing the loving care every old or dying person deserves. Victoria has become the "killing capital" of the world. Not only those close to death but now even mentally sick people, the elderly, even depressed children are offered MAID. After World War II, Germany was broken. Hitler was dead. Germany was torn into pieces. Millions had died. Divine Judgment made an end of the self-proclaimed paradise and destroyed their megalomania. Their dream of a 1,000-year reign destroyed their megalomania. Their dream of a 1,000-year reign was dead. It lasted 12 years. Nuremberg Trials and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms: The 1945 to 1946 Nuremberg Trials tried to bring criminals to justice. Dr. Josef Mengele, the “angel of death,” had performed deadly experiments on prisoners in the concentration camp in Auschwitz, with genetic research on human subjects. Now he was one of those being judged by an international jury. Voluntary consent of humans was declared as absolutely essential and finally became international law. After the war, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms declared Canada to be a nation under the Supremacy of God. The Charter became the highest law of the country with a number of rights and freedoms, including freedom of expression and the right to equality, protected. It became the greatest accomplishment of the country in 1982: The sexual revolution: However, this didn’t last. Under Trudeau the “LGBTQ2S” lobby gained power. God has been removed from our education system and public life. The Bible is now hate literature. Portions of Scripture about homosexual sin aren’t to be quoted. The sexual revolution has taken over. Pride month became Pride season. Everybody must bow down or face consequences. Street crossings were painted in rainbow colours. Rainbow flags are raised over important buildings to show support. “Pride” is the new god; everybody must worship. Father and mother are replaced with gay couples and science in schools has been eclipsed by perverse sexual education. Children are told that gender is fluid and boys can be girls and girls can be boys. The number of children mutilated by the billion-dollar “gender industry” grows daily. Parents aren’t allowed to talk to their own children about their birth sex, otherwise their children could be taken away and parents could go to prison. Not using the “correct” pronoun means severe punishment, even job loss. The U.N. and WHO have urged children to have their own sex partners. Confusion grows. Which way, Canada? After God was removed, Canada went down quickly, and Satan took over. Our new morality isn’t based on any Judeo-Christian faith. Old values were cancelled and replaced. The Ten Commandments from the Bible are ignored and replaced with more bills of tyranny. Canada is no longer a Nation under the Supremacy of God, as stated in the Charter. In this “new Canada,” the government wants total control over every aspect of life. The U.N. and the WHO and the global elites’ “Great Reset” are eager to create the new human, combined with technology that can last “forever,” and AI even replacing humans. We recall the Satanic promise the paradise, “You will be like God” (Genesis 3:5). We are heading toward a world of digital ID and digital currency and its resulting social credit system, omnipresent surveillance cameras, no private property (“you will own nothing and you will be happy”), “15-minute cities,” and no privacy. We must pull away the curtain so people can see the face of Satan, trying to rule the world. If we want to survive as a nation, we must return to the Charter of Rights and Freedom and become again a nation under the Supremacy of God. If we continue the way we are on right now, Divine Judgment will come to Canada as it came to Germany.

Wokism Explained Through the Lens of Species Norms

By Stephen Stacey

This is my sixth article that seeks to explain the cultural onslaught that is taking place in developed nations with a Christian heritage – leading to growing economic and social malaise.

In this article, I wish to talk about Mr and Mrs Smith. As adolescents, Mr. and Mrs. Smith worked hard to develop themselves into mature individuals who could contribute to their community. They didn’t involve themselves in pre-marital sex but dated and learnt the art of courtship. Eventually, they married and worked together to create a home. They have raised several children who any parent would be proud of. Even though they have both had opportunities, they have stayed away from infidelity. And, despite the several challenging moments they have been through, they sought to get through them and would consider divorce as the very last option. Additionally, they ensured they could be economically self-sufficient and not have to rely on the finances of other families. Moreover, to keep their relationship strong, they consistently spend considerable time listening to each other and expressing daily acts of affection. They both like a nice massage and snuggle, and they both welcome each other home with a joyous, exuberant welcome that shows that they are both extremely special to each other. Today, primarily because of their names and sexual norms, one might jump to the conclusion that Mr and Mrs Smith both come from families that are connected to a church community. Actually, Mr and Mrs Smith are both albatrosses. With a slight change in how they express affection, they might be any one of the twenty-five or so other species that pair bond for life. Mr Arctic Tern brings fish to his beloved, and the Stork and Swan families love to do everything together. And Mr and Mrs Crane like a nice dance around the kitchen. All these lasting-love species follow the same sexual and family norms. No pre-marital sex, a bonding moment, almost no infidelity or divorce, and they keep their emotional bonds strong through daily acts of affection. This package of child-protecting behaviours might be called “Absolute Monogamy.” The “lasting love” species norm is one of about nine different species norms that animals can choose from to propagate their species. The other species norms include the harem lions, the single parent cats, the lay loads of eggs and swim away turtles, the alpha-family wolf pack, the matriarchal-led elephants, etc. However, once a species has taken on its species norm, then the mating habits, economic norms, needs of the offspring, and more all become embedded within the psychology of that species. As such, that species norm becomes the optimal species norm for that species. For example, if lionesses tried to raise their offspring alone or turtles only wanted to lay four eggs – like the swans – they would quickly die out as a species. So, if every species on earth has an optimal species norm, what is ours? The Biblical worldview posits the idea that our optimal species norm is that of the true loves. And, after the 17th-century Protestant awakening occurred in Europe and the U.S., most families sought to live out the norm of absolute monogamy – and Christian nations started to flourish as never before. In his 1934 book Sex and Culture, J. Unwin concluded that all the great empires - the Babylonian, Greek, Roman, and East European Teutonic - all started from cities where the citizens decided to focus on embodying the norm of absolute monogamy. By taking on this species norm, the adults were willing to sacrifice their desires for the well-being of the children. When this happened, the cultural processes that brought about family tree improvement in most of the offspring were developed. Due to the sacrifices of the citizens, the cleverness and overall well-being of the average citizen rose dramatically over the next few generations.

Flourishing cultures were born. Once upon a time, in Europe, there were many different religions. But why did Christianity survive and become dominant? Because it alone reminded citizens of a workable, success-producing species norm. And when they lived this norm out, they could see their nations improving year after year. In his book, Unwin explained why all these great civilisations decayed. He found the same process happening again and again. They all increasingly forgot the norm of no pre-marital sex. Adults started to place their sexual desires ahead of the well-being of the children. Accordingly, single parenting increased, and increasing numbers of children experienced lineage decline. Social decline followed. When citizens lose the understanding that rampant pre-marital sex harms children, they quickly end up with the delusional belief that they can do whatever they want with their sexuality and the children will be just fine. It's all downhill from there. One can explain this decline through the lens of species norms. If a female albatross is looking for a life-long partner, she is looking for various qualities in the males she dates. Being responsible, loyal, a team player, having respectful core values, the ability to express ongoing acts of affection, and more all might be of importance. However, in the wild, when a female of a single-parent species is looking for a sexual partner, she is not looking for any of these things in the males she meets. The size of his muscles, the way he dances or sings, the quality of the nest he builds, and other features are qualities that might catch her eye. Thus, when human women are looking to have sex without any requirement that this sexual encounter be part of a long-term relationship, they look for the same external qualities. The dancing, muscled, flashy-dresser males can be seen to be the alpha males. The reliable, loyal, team-player types can even look boring to the "liberated woman." Hence, today's sexualized culture increasingly encourages males to develop qualities that are of very little use in the sustenance of a marital relationship. Thus, marriage declines. More children are born without a father to help raise them. The costs – the welfare payments, the increased numbers of prisons, policemen, social workers, hospitals, and more – all start to overwhelm the finances of a nation, and we go broke. This is where we are today, some fifty years after the start of the sexual revolution. In summary, Christianity promoted the idea that we have a natural species norm – that of the true loves. In this framework, God is seen to be a God of love, and ideally, we role model that love and transfer that love into our families. Our ancestors sought to live up to this norm, and our nations increasingly flourished. However, the progressives, don't believe humans have an optimal species norm – even though every other species has one. As in nature, the future of any community is intricately tied up with the quality of children that the community produces. For children to flourish, parents need to make sacrifices. The moment we start to think we can sacrifice the well-being of children on the altar of adults' desires is the day our democracies decline. And the progressives are doing everything they can to ensure that we create such a child-harming culture. You can stand by and watch. Or you can get involved and do battle against this assault on our nations. For many of us, our first responsibility is to place ourselves on a learning curve. It's our job to know how to build strong, loving families where children experience the love of God. This is the primary way that God's love comes into human communities.

Top OBGYN Confirms Abortion Pill is Dangerous: They're Lying to Women

Sara Garstka. Nov 17, 2023. Life News. The abortion pill ends one life and damages another, Rep. Bob Good, R-Va., said Monday during a panel on chemical abortion held by The Heritage Foundation, referring to the death of the baby and its effects on the mother's mental health. "We need to stand up [as] unashamedly, unapologetically pro-life," Good said of the chemical abortion pill mifepristone, adding: "Government's No. 1 responsibility is to protect the safety and security of its citizens, including unborn life in the womb." "Mifepristone destroys one life and tends to ruin another life as well," the Virginia Republican said during Heritage's event, "Abortion Pills: What's Next?" Also on the panel was Dr. Christina Francis, CEO of the American Association of Pro-Life Obstetricians and Gynecologists, known as AAPLOG. "As a physician, the level of misinformation, inaccurate information, that had come out of physicians, unfortunately, who are pro-abortion has been astounding," Francis said. "This issue of chemical abortion is one of the worst. This is not the easy fix." "You deserve much better," she said, speaking to women, "and you should demand much better." Francis, attesting to the dangers of chemical abortion, said post-abortive women are six to seven times more likely to commit suicide. Mifepristone, also called RU-486, blocks reception of the pregnancy hormone progesterone, shutting off the flow of oxygen and nutrients to the baby in the womb. Forty-eight hours later, the drug misoprostol is taken to induce labour. Although the U.S. Food and Drug Administration says the abortion pill is "safe and effective," chemical abortion is four times more likely to result in complications than surgical abortion, Francis said. These complications include infections, hemorrhage, heavy bleeding, or retained tissue that requires emergency surgery. After having an abortion, women are also more likely to experience pre-term birth in future pregnancies, Francis said, and as many as 35% of abortions using the FDA-approved pill result in a visit to an emergency room. "We have a lot of work to do educating and correcting misinformation that's coming out from the other side," she said. "Legislators have a role to play" in the pro-life movement, said Good, who is a member of the House Freedom Caucus with other conservative lawmakers. Sarah Parshall Perry, senior legal fellow in the Meese Centre for Legal and Judicial Studies at The Heritage Foundation, acted as moderator for the panel discussion. (The Daily Signal is the news outlet of The Heritage Foundation.) Erik Baptist, senior counsel at Alliance Defending Freedom, a legal organization that protects religious freedom, also spoke. Baptist, who has represented women harmed by the abortion pill, said the FDA has failed to properly test the safety of 11 changes since 2016 to its risk evaluation and mitigation strategies for abortion pills. Each change previously was tested individually, but all 11 changes made since 2016 haven't been tested for safety in a single study, Baptist said. Two of the changes: removing the previously required three doctor visits in which the mother would be screened for risks and monitored for complications and extending the approved gestational age from seven to 10 weeks. "This really constitutes, in my opinion, medical malpractice, what's being done now," Francis said. "Women are being treated callously. They're being given these drugs at-who knows how far along they are," the physician said, adding that half of expectant women are wrong about how long they've been pregnant. The Food and Drug Administration has disregarded women's health for far too long, ADF's Baptist said. The federal agency has "absolved the abortionists and prescribers of these drugs from taking care of these women after receiving these drugs," he said, "and it falls upon America's emergency room doctors to clean up that mess and treat and care for these women who have been harmed."
