

We went to the Seoul Detention Center and offer our prayers for True Mother

Sheryll Guillermo Ahn
February 21, 2026

Yesterday morning, before attending the Ancestors Liberation in Chung Pyung, we first went to the Seoul Detention Center to offer our sincere prayers for True Mother's protection.

It was difficult to pretend that I was not worried. I even took a photo with a smiling face, but deep inside my heart was crying. When we arrived, there was only one member assigned to take care of the booth because everyone else had already gone to Chung Pyung to attend the special workshop. After praying, we left the detention center holding on to hope that True Mother would soon be released.

It was so painful to hear the news again that after ten days of medication, around 2 o'clock in the afternoon that day, True Mother was taken back into detention. At that moment, my heart sank. As a child before Heavenly Parent, I could not help but ask how much more our Mother must endure. Yet even in sorrow, I felt Heaven calling us to deeper faith. Heaven sees every tear. Heaven knows every sacrifice. There is always a providence greater than what our eyes can see.

We arrived safely in Chung Pyung and immediately went to Cheonshimwon to report to True Parents and offer our heartfelt prayers. There, we saw that they were preparing for True Parents' Holy Birthday. In the midst of pain and uncertainty, decorations were being arranged and offerings were being prepared. It deeply moved me. Even while facing trials, Heaven continues to move forward. Even when our hearts are heavy, we still prepare to celebrate love, gratitude, and hope.

As we knelt in prayer, I felt that our tears were not only personal. They carried the longing of whole humanity to return to Heavenly Parent's embrace. The path of True Parents has always been a path of sacrifice for the sake of the world. This moment is calling us not to lose faith, but to strengthen it.

I sincerely pray that soon True Mother will be released and that the truth will clearly come to light. May our tears comfort Heaven. May our unity give strength to True Parents. And may this Holy Birthday become a day of heavenly grace and victory.