This is the classical problem of mind-body separation where the body is visible, but thoughts, feelings and values are not. Many assume that the brain can produce an invisible, non-material conscious mind, like a spirit or soul. Others hold that non-material souls or spirits exist independent of physical matter. Still others say there is a progression of interactive roles. This is pretty interesting stuff and you have likely pondered it at one time or another. So let us take an hour to sort this out with our esteemed panel.
