

Ethiopia: a weekend trip with a friend to Awash Game Park southeast of Addis

Katherine French Harries [Cromwell]

January 1976

We had taken a weekend trip with a friend to Awash Game Park about four hours southeast of Addis.

There we had a chance to see many of the animals common to Africa.

It was a great trip.

Through it we learned more about the problems of tribal differences, and how important they -- are in current Ethiopian problems.

There are major differences between styles of life and needs of different tribes, and the age gap between the modern and the old is sharply defined.

There are major cultural differences which make for struggle too.
