The Sunhak Institute of History research library and the CheonJi SunHakWon Museum's Curator wants you to tell the grand, amazing and vibrant saga of True Parents' mission and lives through hundreds of little stories, each of which will be supported by artifacts communicating a whiff of history, and photos, videos, texts and data.

We are creating the Multilingual Divine Principle book collection for the Sunhak Institute of History research library and the CheonJi SunHakWon museum.

Excerpt from the letter which you can download

....“Groundbreaking for the construction of the museum building on September 8 during the Seonghwa Festival, we are gathering photos, documents, video files, data, and actual items that will enable us to tell the most complete, moving and inspiring story of True Parents lives, telling a story that will move the hearts of anyone who visits the museum..”

1. If you know if you know about any languages or editions of the Divine Principles or other books that are missing from the chart. If you notice anything that is missing, let me know at sunhak.contents@gmail.com, or +82-10-4193-1730

2 Send to me here in Korea, by post, or with somebody who is coming for the Seonghwa Festival in September, or bring yourself, any copies of the Divine Principle in any editions and languages that you can spare to donate to the library and museum. This might include copies in other languages that were left behind by brothers and sisters from other countries... We are looking for copies of the older editions... (download to read more)

3. Send an electronic copy of a book or magazine

4. Loan us your book so we can scan it and return it to you
