News outlets have been scaling back their reporting on religion for decades and it shows. Although faith organizations also use the media to get their message out, they find themselves unable to control how they are portrayed and, at times, are subject to misrepresentation and even ridicule. This webinar will address questions such as:

- Is there an anti-religious bias in mainstream media?
- Why does faith seem increasingly irrelevant in today's social context?
- What are effective ways for people of faith to contribute to the public discourse?

Sponsored by the International Media Association for Peace of Universal Peace Federation
