

After reflecting, I came to the conclusion that I will always be a Moonie

After reflecting about the divisions in our church and the 45 years I was in a full-time "mission", I come to the conclusion that I will always be a Moonie.

The road we have all traveled together as brothers and sisters working to build the Kingdom of Heaven is the journey of all our lives.

The self-denial and sacrifice we endured and the strength of the faith to continue for decades and to accept a marriage match and make it work are astonishing.

For me the irrevocable meaning of our lives is this journey regardless of the destination.

I am so proud of all my brothers and sisters who have gone this way together.

I agree with Ron's goal of bringing reconciliation.

But even if that doesn't happen, it's been a good life.
