New Applied Unificationism Blog!

Richard A. Panzer

May 1, 2013

Greetings!

On this 59th anniversary of the founding of the Unification Church, I am excited to announce the launching of a new blog on "Applied Unificationism," which will explore the potential applications of a Unificationist perspective to economics, governance, ethics, culture, marriage/family, women's issues, etc.

As asked by UTS CEO, John Redmond, "What does a Unification psychologist do that is different than a behavioral psychologist? Is there a difference between a Unificationist educator and a secular educator? How should public policy be adjusted to accommodate Unification values?"

Initial commentaries include:

- "God's Providence in the Middle East" by Andrew Wilson,
- "Mind-Body Unity: Beyond an Ethical Approach" by Keisuke Noda,
- "Korea Needs a Peace Treaty to End the Korean War" by Mark Barry,
- "Margaret Thatcher: Unification Feminist" by Mike Mickler,
- "The Era of Applied Unificationism" by John Redmond,
- "Towards God's Ideal for Gender Relations" by Andrew Wilson,
- "The Boston Bombing: Who Will be Recruited, and to What?" by Richard Panzer

As you can see, this is an all-male writer list, so we hope that our talented sisters will submit articles in the near future! We also welcome submissions from 2nd Generation writers. For information about how to submit articles, visit How to Submit Articles.

In any case, check out the blogs, add any comments you may have, and in this exciting time after Foundation Day, let's share our hopefully brilliant, Unificationist-inspired perspectives on how the world can and should change!

On another topic, Barrytown College is steadily moving forward.
