Will you share your "little golden ring" with the world?

The Power of Living for the Sake of Others

Excerpt from The Mother of Peace memoir: *When I departed Korea for [the 1992 WFWP] speaking tour, I had several outfits, a collection suitable for the variety of climates I would encounter. When I returned, all I had was the suit I was wearing. I always give away my clothes, and I had been gone for most of the year. When my husband welcomed me, his first words were, "You did a good job." Then, glancing at my hands, out of the blue, he asked, "By the way, where's your wedding ring?"

*I looked at my hand. Only then did I remember it was gone. "I don't have the ring," I said, "I must have given it to someone."

"To whom did you give it?" he asked, incredulous.

"Ahhh, yes, I gave it to someone during the tour," I said. "But I don't remember who it was. I gave it to someone either to keep as an heirloom or, if necessary, to sell for her family's well-being."

My husband made the natural comment, "It's fine that you gave it away, but you don't remember who you gave it to?"

We really don't focus so much on personal possessions, and that is how we've always been. As we looked into each other's eyes, my husband's gratitude for that quality in me surfaced. He collected himself, smiled and nodded, and the welcoming ceremony proceeded. -Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, WFWP founder
