

Women are Called to Heal and Lead the World - WFWP HerStory Awards

Angelika Selle
May 30, 2022

As we turn on the news each day and perhaps see more and more distressing stories of tragedies happening around the world, we may wonder, is there still goodness out there? On May 21, 2022, WFWP USA honored four outstanding women who are leading in various fields to heal and make a positive change for peace. Each woman shared some deep wisdom and insights from their own life journeys to empower and uplift others. Through their stories, each of the 40 participants at the virtual ceremony could feel that there are still positive messages being shared and people who are putting goodness into action.

We heard from women who worked in the political sphere, in media and entertainment, work to empower and uplift women and girls, and in the realm of guiding others through health crises. While each may seem from a very different walk of life and experience, a common thread was their hearts to bring healing, love, and compassion to those around them.

Read below for a snippet of their stories and lessons shared upon receiving the HerStory award. You can read more about each of them and listen to the recording of the ceremony as well.

Sharon Lund: Founder and Executive Director, Sacred Living Sacred Dying; Founder of Sacred Life Publisher and Production

I knew then I had to either decide to let this virus empower me and make the most of my life and be of service to people and be divinely guided or I could become a victim...It doesn't matter how any man, woman, or child becomes infected, we all deserve the same compassion, love, and understanding.

What I know is my entire life has been divinely guided by God. I ask every day, "God, what would you like me to do today?" I also know through both of my near-death experiences, I was given my life purpose to become a healer, teacher around the world, and write books. I find my strength, I find my glory in God.

Vanessa Dowdy: Chief Executive Officer, Amour Finer Touch; Executive Officer and Co-founder, It's a Girls' Thang

Today I chose Luke 10:27, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength and with all your mind"; and, 'Love your neighbor as yourself.'" A person's love for God must show itself in the love for people. I consider myself a servant of God and I love people.

In 2000, I was diagnosed with breast cancer. I remember thinking, "God, I have done what you asked me to do. I feel like I lived the life You wanted me to live." I asked, "Why me?" But God told me, "Why not you? I've chosen you as this vessel to go through this experience so that you can help others who have come behind you." I have been able to encourage other women who have contracted breast cancer, even my younger sister. God has allowed me to encourage, push, and prod all girls and women I come in contact with to seek to be better individuals.

Cathleen Trigg-Jones: CEO and Founder, Trigg Global Media; CEO and Founder, iWoman TV

I personally have always believed that when women collaborate and work together, magic happens. It's my life's work to be a storyteller as a journalist and a producer.

Life wasn't always easy for me. I didn't always have the confidence that you see standing before you today. In my early years, I started out in foster care, I was left at an orphanage. And then after high school, I decided that I wanted to go to college. I attended Delaware State University, a historically Black university; that opened my eyes to the possibilities and made me believe that I could do anything.

However, it wasn't until I got out of college and I realized I really wanted to tell the news. I wanted to tell people stories. I walked up to a television station and I offered to take the trash out... That turned into my very first television job. Shortly after that, I was tapped by our President of the United States. At the time he was the US Senator from Delaware and he asked me to come on board as his Assistant Press Secretary... I can't say enough about the courage, determination, and the confidence that I gained.

Congresswoman Yvette D. Clarke: U.S. Representative for New York's Ninth District

Women are saving the world. Make no mistake, it is because we play such a pivotal role in God's providence... Women are steadily building new blueprints to carry us into a bright future, not only as wives, mothers, aunts, and sisters - which is fine because we multitask and we are many things to many people - but as leaders in all fields of human endeavor.

I was blessed to be born into a family determined and committed to changing, impacting, and uplifting the most vulnerable in the world around us. My trailblazing mother, Dr. Una Clarke, was the first foreign-born woman to be elected to New York City's legislature, known as the New York City Council. I have been blessed to have my life shaped by her teaching and guidance. So, my upbringing has always been a steady diet of civic engagement, public service, and community building. Women are being called to heal and lead the world to a peaceful existence and it is time for us to be heard.

Sharon Lund was awarded the HerStory Award at the National HerStory Award Ceremony of the Global Women's Peace Network on May 21, 2022, for her exemplary work to dispel the stigmas surrounding challenges of HIV/AIDS, and support, heal, and uplift others, based on her journey of overcoming unimaginable challenges. We applaud her service to women, children, families, and the community filled with love and compassion.

Sharon Lund has danced with life and death throughout her life. She is a fearless pioneer, worldwide educator and advocate, a spiritual counselor, and a Metaphysical minister. She has worked and volunteered for decades around HIV/AIDS and end-of-life issues. She is an author and loving and devoted single mother. She is a woman of faith who lives her life with passion and purpose.

Sharon has been faced with challenges throughout her life. However, she has embraced them and found the blessing in each one which has empowered her.

From the age of three to twelve, Sharon was sexually abused by her grandfather. He told her, "If you tell anyone, I'll kill your Mommy."

As she was being sexually abused her spirit lifted out of her body, and an spirit guide/angel took her to special places – the park, her playroom to play with her dolls, to swing high on the swing set and look up to the heavens. From this experience, Sharon found the blessing of a deep spiritual connection to God/Infinite Spirit and her spirit guide/angel.

In 1984, Sharon was diagnosed with anorexia and severe depression. She attempted suicide, caused from unexpressed emotions, mental and physical abuse from a previous boyfriend, her second husband, and her grandfather's sexual abuse. She had low self-esteem and believed the only way to end her suffering was to kill herself. As she placed a razor on her wrist Sharon said her final prayer. "God, please forgive me for what I'm about to do. If there's anything I need to know before I kill myself, let me know now."

The Light of God surrounded her, and she felt an immense love and peace. She heard, "My Child, it's not your time to die. Get yourself into the hospital, and when you get out, you'll become a healer, teach around the world and write books."

This was Sharon's first near-death experience.

Sharon was hospitalized for anorexia and depression for three months. The blessing of this experience is she learned to love herself, her inner child, gained self-esteem and learned to forgive the unforgivable, through techniques to heal her body-mind-spirit. What she learned allowed her to assist other people worldwide in their healing process.

Sharon's life is about service. In early 1986, she began volunteering in the Los Angeles AIDS community, teaching mind-body-spirit modalities. In 1986, her life changed forever when she saw her ex-husband, Bill, on a Dan Rather's AIDS Special titled AIDS Hit Home. He announced to the world that he was infected with AIDS and had led a secret-bisexual lifestyle. He also infected his previous wife.

Sharon tested for HIV, and it came back positive. Bill admitted right before he died that he was infected when he married her in 1983. The blessing was, instead of becoming a victim, Sharon allowed the virus to empower her and lead her on a journey to teach worldwide and volunteer in numerous AIDS communities.

Sharon was the first heterosexual woman in Southern California to go public with being HIV positive. She started the first women's HIV/AIDS support group, and also helped to create, interview staff members, and set up the first women and children's HIV/AIDS clinic in Los Angeles. She became an advocate for women and children who were infected, as she was on the Board of Directors for various organizations, and community programs. She helped break the stigma around HIV/AIDS globally. People, especially the media, wanted to treat her differently because of how she became infected. However, Sharon's motto is, "It doesn't matter how any man, woman, or a child becomes infected; we all deserve the same compassion, love, and understanding. Equality for all."

In 1992 Sharon was one of four women to testify at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) AIDS Surveillance Hearing Conference to expand the definition of HIV/AIDS to include women's symptoms. Also in 1992, she was one of fifty-three women infected throughout the world to start a women's organization, (ICW) International Community of Women Living with HIV/AIDS. Today ICW members live in one-hundred-twenty countries on five continents. In 1995, she accepted an invitation from President Bill Clinton to speak at the White House.

As an author, keynote speaker, and workshop leader, Sharon has presented throughout the United States and internationally in Canada, Russia, Great Britain, Europe, and Japan. She was instrumental in promoting global changes for women and children living with HIV/AIDS. She has been interviewed on such shows as Eye on America, CNN, 48 Hours, and The Oprah Winfrey Show. She has been featured in countless magazines, including The Oprah “O” Magazine, Shape, and Women’s Own.

In 1996 Sharon was hospitalized for nearly two years, due to AIDS complications. She was down to eighty-six pounds and dying. This is where Sharon experienced her second near-death experience. Her spirit lifted out of her body, she immediately felt healed and at peace. Two Spirit Guides show her a review of her life, and in each scene, she heard, “Look at the difference you made in their life.” Then she went through the Tunnel of Light. The Light of God telepathically spoke to her. She heard, “My Child, unlike the time before this time you can stay, or you can return. Before you make your decision, I want to show you one more thing.”

Immediately Sharon relived being pregnant with her daughter. Feeling her first kick, giving birth to her daughter, Jeaneen, and hearing her coos. She then relived various things they did together including educating women and children about AIDS.

Then a spark of Light hit Sharon, and she found herself back in the presence of the love and Light of God. She heard, “My Child, what is your decision?”

Even though Sharon was one with absolute peace, love, joy, and serenity, with God, she said, “I need to return to my daughter.”

Instantly she was back in the hospital bed. For the next hour to hour and half Sharon could see every cell in her body vibrating with light. She knew her life was being healed and restored, cell by cell.

Sharon heard her life purpose would expand to write books, and to start a book publishing company, Sacred Life Publishers. She was also to bring back the sacredness of life and death and was guided to start a non-profit organization, Sacred Living Sacred Dying, Inc.

Sharon is the author of Sacred Living Sacred Dying: A Guide to Embracing Life and Death; The Integrated Being: Techniques to Heal Your Mind-Body-Spirit; and There Is More: 18 Near-Death Experiences. She has been Divinely Guided to publish nearly fifty books by other authors. She is the co-producer of the Award-Winning Documentary Dying to LIVE: NDE.

Sharon knows within her heart and mind that her life has been Divinely Guided throughout all of her endeavors. She finds support and strength through Infinite Spirit/God, being out in nature, volunteering, being of service, and through her beautiful, loving daughter Jeaneen, who she has a deep connection with.

Sharon Lund lives in Hawaii, on the Island of Maui. She truly is living her life with purpose and passion.
