Dear Friend,

It's happening! Goodness is growing, because people like you put values into action. And taking action starts with a conversation.

Kiyomi Schmidt of Women's Federation for World Peace was inspired to see and hear the growing public awareness about sexual integrity through the "metoo" hashtag on social media.

She created a virtual meeting of activists to share their personal stories about sexual harassment and its effects. She recorded and shared it as an online video series. The masculine and feminine angle, the children and adult angle, the local and global angle, all became part of the bigger conversation. Watch the video here.

If we don't talk about this toxic culture, if it is kept "taboo," then we cannot change it.

Women leading from the heart, initiating discussions via video production, to improve human relationships, this is made possible thanks to donor support of WFWP. We can support many more projects, and reach many more people through media, with your help.

Speak your values, and grow goodness this season! Your support will help keep WFWP strong in 2018.
