FEB 9: NE Asia Environment in a Century of Conflict

Northeast Asia, especially the Korean Peninsula, has seen conflict and division since 1905. Occupation by Japan, WWII and the Korean War, and then 70 more years of hostile division. The air, land and water have been like children who are ignored in a home where the parents are fighting. The devastation has been terrible. The Gobi Desert, while not an actor in the conflict, wreaks havoc with the air in China, both Koreas and Japan and gets politicized. This webinar is one of a series that will explore the environmental issues of the Korean Peninsula and the larger region.

TUESDAY, February 9 from 2 - 3 pm EST (New York time)
