This Monday and Tuesday we felt spirit world move.

We were all back in the swing of witnessing after Sunday and went out in pairs right after Monday's morning inspiration by Greta, one of the Albanian CARP members. She presented Albert Einstein's letter to his daughter about love being the greatest force in any equation. Tuesday's morning inspiration by Ryan Robertson gave us a valuable reminder of the purpose of fundraising.

With the morning inspiration in our hearts, within the first 15 minutes of going out on the streets, 9 guests filled the CARP center, interacting with each other and receiving Introduction to the Divine Principle. Our team brought in guests all throughout the day, making calls and invitations to the center, and by the end, we were able to bring in 17 guests, which was our exact external goal!

We got visits from Nicola, a young aspiring rapper; from Cleo, who gifted us a backpack full of manga comics he collected; from Mateo, a student nurse who hopes to be a basketball coach in the future. So many different characters and people, all who we were able to practice loving and striving to lead them back to God and our True Parents.

Tuesday the CARP center was full once again. Returning guests filled the lecture hall, all of whom were young men from the high school and university. There are much fewer male members in Albania than females, and the CARP members jokingly but not so jokingly asked us to witness to more brothers. God does have a sense of humor, listening always, and all our guests both days were brothers alone.

After the first half of the day, the snow outside was falling hard. The temperature is below freezing, a sharp contrast to what the other GPA nations are experiencing in the much warmer countries. But we are grateful and enjoy the winter wonderland gifted to us, with the magnificent view of the Alps and cobblestone streets of Korçë right outside our window.

Tomorrow is an exciting day, as we will be doing a service project at the high school and will be interviewed by the local television station. We are preparing our hearts and minds for the experience tomorrow will bring.
