

FFWPU USA: A 'Huge Breakthrough:' National Ocean Challenge Program 2022

"The ocean is such an equalizing place no matter who you are," said Tasnah Bercy, co-director of the National Ocean Challenge Program (NOCP). "We are all equally being challenged by the ocean ... but there was definitely this feeling of a huge breakthrough with this group."

Bercy shared about NOCP's 2022 program, which ran from July 5 to 27, during an FFWPU USA leaders' meeting. A group of 20 participants spent three weeks on and off the shores of Kodiak, Alaska, as they learned a range of activities, including the basics of boating and fishing, and how to jig and troll for Pacific salmon, halibut, rockfish, and ling cod. Bercy said NOCP is a unique opportunity - and a big adjustment - for many young participants who typically have limited experience on the ocean.

"The first three days of ocean fishing there was rough weather, so most of the participants were seasick," shared Bercy. "I think the experience of the first few days was tough ... [but overall] we had a really incredible group of people, and we were really touched and moved by how God is working through everyone's lives."

NOCP participants, who came from across the U.S. and as far as Poland, Andora, and South Korea, said they sought to strengthen their faith and deepen their connection with God through the ocean and nature. Others were looking to reflect and gain clarity on their goals and direction in life, while several more relayed their desire to understand the Ocean Providence, develop leadership training, and share experiences of growth with the group.

"[NOCP] is an environment to discover more about myself, learn leadership skills, and invest in the future of my community," said one U.S. participant.

"I was seeking a place of reflection and healing," shared another participant. "I felt that I needed to do this ... Along with the excitement [of being on the ocean], some part of me felt that God called me to learn True Father's spirit of preparing, waiting, and praying before any crucial event or choice."

The purpose of NOCP, Bercy said, is to empower future leaders to become true owners of God's Creation through ocean-based educational and experiential activities rooted in the teachings of NOCP's founders, True Parents. "Our three objectives are to develop character and confidence through seamanship, experience the heart of stewardship, and cultivate faith through experiencing God's love through nature," she said. "The lessons that you learn from a boat and from the Alaskan spirit, and mind-body unity, help you to digest what you go through with gratitude."

With a robust itinerary, NOCP focused on faith lessons, next steps in building a stronger foundation with God, and preparing for the future. Daily sessions included "The Power of Our Actions," "Stewardship Starts with Love," "Life of Faith Lessons from a Boat," and "Claiming Victories," among several others. Participants enjoyed various outdoor excursions and activities, reflection time, and worship as well.

"We had some very awesome experiences out on the water," said Bercy. "Really incredible things, like people catching a six-foot-long ling cod, which is crazy. There was a really high spirit and energy."

For many participants, the challenges and rewards of NOCP created an unforgettable and life-changing experience that they will carry beyond their summer at sea. "I'm really grateful for all the foundation that is here in Kodiak," said Bercy. "We definitely felt something special this year."
