From July 13 - 19, FFWPU Argentina held a vibrant 7-day winter workshop at the retreat center in Anisacate, Córdoba - a cherished site where annual Principle education seminars foster a "Culture of Heart."

Twelve spirited participants between the ages of 13 and 22 attended, most coming from the city of La Granja. Though many were newly introduced to the Principle, they demonstrated admirable dedication - making fundraising efforts to join the program with sincerity and a strong desire for personal growth.

Supported by a staff of about eight members, the seminar nurtured an environment of brotherhood and self-discovery. The program featured dynamic activities such as sports, team-building exercises, and a field trip to the historic Tajamar in Alta Gracia, a site rich with Jesuit heritage.

Guided by the theme "Culture of Heart," the daily schedule began with HDH and character education sessions, encouraging core values and a lifestyle centered on true love. During the heartwarming closing ceremony, participants received special prizes along with a book containing messages and speeches from the True Parents - offered as a compass for continued spiritual and personal development.

A particularly moving moment was the arrival of a mother from Jujuy Province, who traveled over 1,000 kilometers to support her daughter - reflecting the profound hope and encouragement that families place in this kind of initiative.
