

Definition of a True Woman

Anne-Marie Mylar
February 17, 2014

A true woman will have accomplished what she was created for. A true woman will have the feeling of fulfillment that will resonate throughout her being. A true woman will have experienced all feminine aspect of God's love. A true woman will know she is not a man and will have no desire to ever compete with one or become one.

A true woman can give life. A true woman can nurture life. A true woman can look at her husband and sons in ecstasy and be proud of their worldly accomplishments without envy, their victories are her doing. A true woman will raise her daughters to become true woman.

In an ideal world, a true woman shall be found at all levels of society. She will not be found there because she victoriously overcame men's rules. She will be found there because she was the best individual for the position she now holds.