Novosibirsk, Russia—Holding the Peace Road banner, a group of young people met for a photo shoot on one of the world's longest arch bridges.

The Bugrinsky Bridge, which crosses the Ob, the world's seventh longest river, was the site of the July 21, 2016, event, in which the young Siberians sought to connect with the spirit of the many Peace Road marathons, bicycle rides and other events taking place around the world.

To the young participants, this bridge, which was only completed in 2014, symbolizes the hope that the tunnel under the Bering Strait, which could unite the world in connection with the International Highway, certainly will be built.
