Day 4 completed and into day 5.

This blessing is an interesting one because I'm pretty sure there's something going on here but it's hard to put ones finger on it. Through the readings I've had with Debra, she's mentioned the work she's doing with the birth families and tribes of our children. So as a result, we seem to be connected with the tribal backgrounds of our five children. And as mentioned earlier, Dr. Lady Kim indicated that adopted children do retain a secondary connection to their birth lineage and presumably that connection could also extend to the adoptive parents through their love for their children. Also, there is the direction from Korea that adopted children need to liberate their birth lineages before their adopted lineages. Now what the exact benefits are here I can't say, but I am quite certain that there must be one or many and that these benefits must relate directly to the Restoration Providence as far as the respective tribes are concerned.

Instead of doing the preaching on this one, I would love to hear your thoughts. I am open to any ideas you might have.

Tomorrow is Good Friday
