

8-Day Prayer and Fast for Healing in the True Family - The Eighth Full Day

Robert Sullivan
September 19, 2017

The last prayer on Holy Ground is complete and the fast has been broken with a wonderful bowl of Susan Fefferman's miso soup. Hallelujah!

At the start of the final prayer for True Father and the True Family, Adrian and I had seated ourselves on Holy Ground and as soon as we began to pray, we both heard a beautiful voice of a young girl singing who was walking our way. She stopped right next to us and kept singing in a language we couldn't understand. I tried to glance up to look up at her but could not see her. Adrian said she sat down next to him as she sang for about two minutes. Her voice was absolutely beautiful and comforting. Then she got up and walked away singing as we continued to pray. My initial thought was that she was a church member who knew about the condition. Now I don't know.

At the end of the prayer, I was thinking, "Well this is it. It's over. It's done. It's finished." But instead Karen Carpenter popped into my mind, "We've only just begun!" And after a quick one word protest, "What?" The words, "Doesn't the 'providence for the start' mean anything to you?" So I guess this condition was only the beginning, but right now I'm not sure where we are going from here. And if any of you who have been following and praying in support of the condition have any suggestions, please feel free to share them either here or through messenger. At the moment, I am thinking about a group phone call every evening where we could pray together for the True Family.

Once again, I just can't express how much I have appreciated everyone's support for the condition and prayers for the True Family. Let's find a way to keep it up. God bless.