Articles covering True Mother's Surgery

According to sources, Dr. Hak-ja Han, 83, underwent shoulder surgery under general anesthesia at approximately 1:00 PM KST today, April 14. The procedure began earlier than scheduled and concluded at around 5:30 PM. The surgery was completed successfully and she is currently recovering. The surgery took place during an ongoing medical hospitalization authorized by Seoul Central District Court. On March 27, the court granted her a temporary suspension of pre-verdict detention, a legal mechanism allowing defendants with serious medical conditions to receive treatment outside custody. She has been hospitalized continuously since that ruling. The authorized hospitalization period is set to expire on April 30.

A Judicial Suicide: The Tokyo Decision Against the Unification Church Part 3

Yet, astonishingly, the grounds for dissolution relied upon in the Tokyo High Court’s recent dissolution decision (Presiding Judge Motoko Miki, March 4) are even worse. Because the full text of the decision has not been made public [at the time of this writing], I will discuss the matter below based on a summary published by “The Asahi Shimbun.”

First, this decision addresses the activities and doctrinal content of the Korean Family Federation and its founder, Sun Myung Moon, and grounds the dissolution order in them. The image of the Family Federation portrayed by the court is that of an anti-Japanese cult originating in Korea, with a strong brainwashing character, inducing Japanese believers to make large donations for doctrinal reasons.

According to sources, Dr. Hak-ja Han, 83, underwent shoulder surgery under general anesthesia at approximately 1:00 PM KST today, April 14.

The procedure began earlier than scheduled and concluded at around 5:30 PM.

The surgery was completed successfully and she is currently recovering.

The surgery took place during an ongoing medical hospitalization authorized by Seoul Central District Court.

On March 27, the court granted her a temporary suspension of pre-verdict detention, a legal mechanism allowing defendants with serious medical conditions to receive treatment outside custody.

She has been hospitalized continuously since that ruling. The authorized hospitalization period is set to expire on April 30.

A 83-year-old woman has just undergone major shoulder surgery under general anesthesia.

When that authorization expires, she faces return to the same detention facility her legal team has described as the source of repeated falls and cardiovascular deterioration.

The question is not complicated.

Is sending a post-surgical patient in her condition back into that environment, one that already damaged her health, something any medical standard would permit?

Thank you for the update on TM's surgery. I am sorry that she has had to go through more ordeals. It seems that the judicial system no longer has any human feelings. Would they allow their mother or grandmother to endure such treatment? I doubt it. Please release Hak Ja Han.

Well, looks like in the Korean criminal proceedings, it is not the doctor who decides whether a prisoner will be allowed to receive treatment and how long the treatment will last, but the judge who knows nothing about medicine. Is this even possible? Welcome to South Korea!

Detention has become the means of punishment no matter how they interpret it legally. Still #TheMotherOfPeace has dreamt of a prosperous future even for those who ordered this kind of treatment because She wants to become their mother too.

The persecution of Holy Mother Han may be connected to communist influence. Some atheist ideologies misrepresent her work and justify cruelty while ignoring religious freedom. It is deeply sad to see this injustice.

I really hope Mother Han can go back home safely as soon as possible.

Dr. Hak Ja Han fell multiple times in her 70-square-foot cell at Seoul Detention Center in January. She never complained.

According to her lawyers, she does not express pain unless it is severe. She tried to maintain a composed appearance. She asked only for painkillers.

No one at the facility diagnosed the shoulder injury.

It was only discovered after a court granted her third medical suspension from detention and she was transferred to a hospital. Doctors found the left shoulder damage that had gone untreated for months.

The question that should keep someone in Seoul awake tonight: how does a post-cardiac-surgery 83-year-old fall repeatedly in your custody, ask for painkillers for months, and no one orders imaging on her shoulder?

The answer is in the pattern.

November 2025: three-day release for emergency eye surgery. Returned to custody.

February 2026: ten-day release for fall injuries. Extension denied. Returned.

March 2026: third suspension granted. Confined to hospital.

April 14, 2026: shoulder surgery. For an injury sustained in January.

204 days since her arrest on September 23, 2025. No conviction. No verdict.

She arrived for questioning in a wheelchair, still recovering from heart surgery. The court detained her anyway.

A former political prisoner from communist Czechoslovakia wrote publicly that her conditions are worse than what he endured in 1974.

Former U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo @mikepompeo called it lawfare.

On April 3, she was nominated for the 2026 Nobel Peace Prize.

She received that nomination recovering from a surgery that should never have been necessary. Because the injury should have been caught in January. Because she should not have been falling in the first place.

When a detention facility cannot keep a patient from falling, cannot diagnose what those falls break, and the patient is too dignified to scream, the system is not failing.

It is choosing not to look.
