Commemorating the 50th Anniversary of the Yankee Stadium Rally

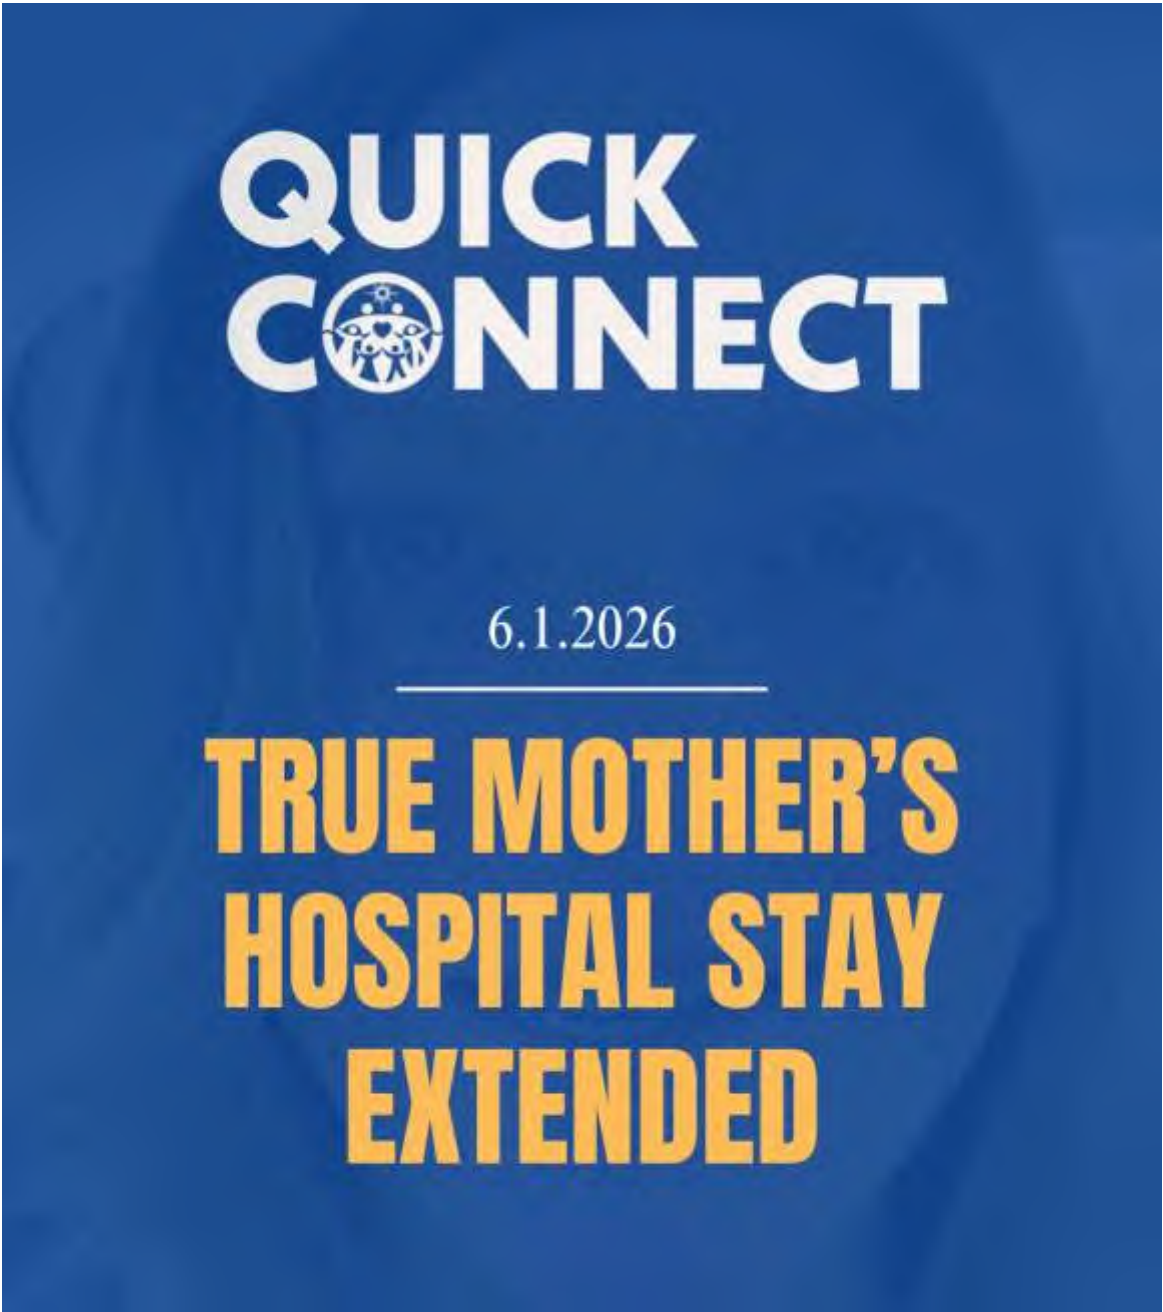

"Today we are living in an age when we must look at every individual and every nation as vital components of the world. In our world, there are basically two ways of life. One is the selfish way of life, and the other is the unselfish way of life where one thinks beyond himself and his family and lives for the greater purpose of the nation and the world. Throughout history, whether in the East or West, those who played important roles were public-minded or selfless persons."

- Rev. Sun Myung Moon, Yankee Stadium Rally, June 1, 1976

Beyond Planting Trees: a Time to Grow a Forest

Over many years we have announced many visionary plans in anticipation of the firm settlement of Cheon Il Guk. Today I would like to speak with you about the most fundamental vision of all—the very root and point of origin from which every other vision springs.

The vision of Cheon Il Guk, which we have long dreamed of, proclaimed, and struggled to realize, has never been something distant or abstract. Our Heavenly Parent’s grand dream—to realize Heaven’s Will upon this earth—began at the very moment of Creation, when the universe came into being and Adam and Eve were established in Heavenly Parent’s image.

Suspension of Detention for Dr. Hak Ja Han Extended by One Month, Through June 30

The Seoul Central District Court has extended the suspension of detention for Family Federation leader Dr. Hak Ja Han by one more month.

Presiding Judge Woo In-sung approved her request for the extension today.

The suspension was set to end on the 30th of this month. It now runs until 2 p.m. on June 30.

The reason given is hospital treatment.

Since her detention began last September, her health has gotten worse. Her lawyers have asked the court to suspend her detention several times.

In November last year and February this year, she was treated for injuries from falls and had glaucoma surgery.

In March, the court approved a suspension so she could get treatment for her shoulder. She has been on trial while temporarily released.

At a hearing in February, her lawyer said that after three separate falls, the pain had spread through her whole body and painkillers were no longer enough.

The lawyer added that she could not get proper treatment inside the detention center. She needed to be hospitalized or cared for by a dedicated nurse.

Obviously, the Korean justice system does not care about her health, in fact, they have shown great animosity toward her and have turned their back on human rights.

Grateful for the suspension. However she should be released, after almost a year they have not been able to make a case .

If her time in the detention center needs months in a hospital to recover from, then it makes no sense to EVER have to go back there. It couldn't be more obvious.

I'm grateful that her hospital stay was extended again. In all of this madness, there is some sense. The court listened to the medical experts' opinion that Mother Han needs at least 2 months to recover after her surgery to repair the shoulder injury she received in detention

What Could Happen to Dr. Hak Ja Han: A Realistic Look at June 12 and Beyond

Dr. Hak Ja Han's final hearing is set for June 12, 2026.

Here is what can realistically happen, and what South Korea's conviction numbers say about the odds.

When will the verdict happen?

June 12 is the closing hearing, not the verdict. Both sides give final arguments that day. The judge then takes about 2 to 4 weeks to decide. Expect the actual verdict between late June and mid-July 2026.

Where does she stay while waiting?

She is already detained, so she stays in the detention center during those 2 to 4 weeks.

What happens on verdict day?

Her status changes immediately, on one of two paths.

Path A — She goes home that day. A Not Guilty verdict, a suspended sentence, or a fine voids the detention. She is released the same day. This is what happened to Rev. Son Hyun-bo in February 2026: suspended sentence, released that day.

Path B — She stays in custody. If the judge orders actual prison time, she remains confined to serve it, usually at the detention center if there is an appeal.

How do appeals work?

Not on verdict day. After the verdict, both sides have a strict 7-day window to file for appeal. The appeals trial starts months later.

Can prosecutors lock her back up if they appeal?

No. If she is released on verdict day (Path A), filing an appeal does not put her back in jail. She stays free at home during the appeals process. She would only be re-arrested if she loses the appeal and the higher court orders prison.

What are the realistic odds?

South Korea has one of the highest conviction rates in the developed world. Per the Supreme Prosecutors' Office, the full-acquittal rate in first-instance courts hit 1.06% recently, a decade high. For years it sat below 1%. Ministry of Justice data for 2007 to 2015 showed the not-guilty rate never rose above 0.7%, and fell under 0.5% in four of those years.

In plain terms: more than 98 of every 100 defendants who reach a verdict are convicted of something. A full acquittal is rare.

Two things to keep in mind.

These are averages across all cases, not a prediction for one trial. And a conviction is not the same as prison.

The acquittal numbers only count people cleared of every charge. Many who are convicted still receive suspended sentences or fines, which under Path A means release on verdict day.

The dates that matter: June 12 for closing arguments, late June to mid-July for the verdict, and the 7 days after for appeals.

Thank you the Monarch Report for this detailed informations about Mother Han. There is no way that we, from the international community, could understand how the justice system works in South Korea.

It seems the presumption of innocence doesn't exist in the present Korean judiciary system. I'm not well versed in legal matters but to keep someone in detention for such a long time without evidence means either ignorance or wickedness. Sorry to say.

99% conviction rate in South Korea is nuts. Anyone who falls out of favor with the current administration is in deep trouble!

In Dr. Hak Ja Han's case, charges keep changing and churches are raided and re-raided nonstop for almost a year now.

This lawfare has nothing to do with
