I would like to share an experience I had a few years ago. Since I often talk to God, which is very personal and that can happen anywhere, when I'm on the street, when I go, I feel like he's walking next to me. At that time I said to God, "Can you really rely on me?" I was sad that he did not believe me, If I did something for you, you would believe in me. Then God said to me that you will not be able to do it. I was sad that he did not believe in me, I got angry that he did not really trust me. I said to him, you do not believe me, but I'll show that you can trust me.

It was about a specific goal where I wanted to show God that he can trust me. I wanted to show in this process that he can trust me the whole thing was really unreal and it required an incredible challenge that was tied to a 10 day fast and exams in school and at the same time a hard work I did at the same time. If I think about it today, it was really crazy. The hardest part was not falling asleep, studying the work and fasting. Everything was so unspeakably exhausting.

I just wanted to prove to God that he can trust me. There were situations where I almost fell down with weakness and at the same time the spiritual world became such a real reality. And the spiritual world supported me. I have already seen people around me become incredibly active to help me in my work.

At the end of this condition I was so aware that God was watching me all the time and he gave me the insight that he could trust me It was like a party and I celebrated this occasion with God I had his faith in me and the food tasted soooo good.

Kind regards Ena
