

Weekend Seminar

Neumühle, Bad Camberg, Germany

27. - 28. May 2017

By Claus Dubisz

A group of just less than a dozen people participated in this weekend workshop where they heard deep and intense presentations in a warm and friendly atmosphere. Although still only May, the weather was as in mid-summer.

The moderator Heidi W. opened the workshop with the important question: „what is your expectation of this weekend?“ And in his presentation, Claus D. encouraged the guests: „don't just write down everything that you see on the board-but take note of what is important for you.“

A landmark aspect of the Saturday presentation was the first public showing of one of the new videos about the Principle: ‚The Three Blessings‘. The essence of the topic is conveyed in only 11 minutes, so that during the presentation itself there is time to elaborate on aspects in more depth such as: how the four types of love that we learn in the family differ, and the importance of this kind of training for our life as a member of society.

Parallel to the workshop, Franz and a few strong young men from Giessen were hammering and sawing a thick felled tree into manageable pieces and the artist Ji Seuk Baek from Croatia was painting decorative murals. Preparations for the Whitsun festival were underway!

After a lunch prepared by the young chef Michael F., we made an afternoon excursion to Gnadenthal and experienced the fresh country air as well as the special spirituality of the cloistral complex. Returning in the lush green to Neumühle, we were happy to have the forest as a welcome shade from the blistering heat.

After strong coffee and home-made cake (thank you, Agnes), Ulrich T., explained how God's ideal was lost and the laborious path he took to fulfill His longing for an equal to share his heart. It seemed as if the biblical figures on the hill just outside the lecture hall were listening spell-bound. Restoration is a decisive process for all concerned.

The evening's entertainment brought out the hidden creativity of many of the participants. Violeta from Gießen thrilled us with her wonderful voice, and she conducted and led us in two canons. The talented young footballer Nathan juggled his beloved ball to rock music. And we enjoyed other interesting, artistic contributions, both sad and amusing.

The tragedy of Jesus' life, as well as his unshakable love despite his betrayal by those around him: this first lecture on Sunday morning was deeply moving.

The audience was so fascinated by the history that followed and God's repeated attempts to reach His children, that we continued without a break. The search for the new Adam has come to an end, the marriage of the lamb has taken place and his bride prepared; biblical and Christian history flow logically into the life and work of True Parents. The new era of Blessed families is the fulfillment of all religions.

It is up to our guests as to whether they decide to take the path of the Blessing.

The seminar ended with the presentation of a certificate of attendance and the usual group photograph.

Hearty thanks go to all those who participated and supported, the staff, and the God of the weather!
