From July 22 to August 24, Heavenly Africa's Top Gun youth missionaries conducted an ambitious lecture tour across 10 universities in Matadi City, Democratic Republic of Congo.

On August 8-9, Pastor Wabula Kombega Namkibu addressed 421 students across three university campuses. His lectures focused on the four realms of love that form the foundation of Hyojeong character education: parental, conjugal, children, and sibling love, all centered on Heavenly Parent. Pastor Namkibu stressed the importance of this education in addressing global challenges.

Following these sessions, Top Gun missionary Choi Ju-heon, along with CARP Congo's central president Mukori and UPF local secretary Mata Di-Mata Gilbert, introduced the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles (CARP). They presented CARP as a global organization transcending ideologies and systems, embodying the purity, passion, and hope of youth in pursuit of world peace.

The team highlighted CARP's vision of creating a global family united by true love and its mission to support the UN's Sustainable Development Goals. They emphasized CARP's focus on character education and peace projects aimed at nurturing global citizens.

The youth missionaries concluded the tour expressing confidence that many university students would embrace True Mother's vision, transforming into peace-loving youth capable of changing the world.

This lecture series represents a significant step in spreading the message of peace and unity among young minds in the Democratic Republic of Congo, aligning with the broader goals of Heavenly Africa and the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification.
