The Women's Federation for World Peace is running the Young Women's Speech Contest for the third time in South London.

The purpose is to encourage young women to challenge and educate themselves to speak in public, and to empower and develop their talent to express their dreams and ideals. It's also one of the areas that young women can involve themselves in leadership, feel more ready to stand in front of a public audience, and gain more confidence for their future careers.

This year, the River South Community is holding the event on Saturday 1st July at 4.30pm at the Peace Embassy. There will be prizes for the winners.
