Last week, on Friday, May 22, we held a national online program featuring a lecture by Mrs. Gabriella Papné Dancsó, the head of the city of Szeged.

During her presentation, she shared inspiring lessons from the lives of four outstanding Hungarian women who made significant contributions to society through their dedication and service to others. The lecture concluded with an introduction to the life and work of Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, the founder of the Women's Federation for World Peace (WFWP).

The program provided a valuable opportunity to learn from women whose lives exemplify compassion, leadership, and living for the sake of others. Participants were encouraged by their examples and inspired to contribute positively to their families, communities, and society.
