

Our first focus should be: How can we help people everywhere raise their families

True Father was always very clear about the main purpose of our lives: live for the sake of others. And Mother recently was very clear that America should live for the sake of the world. A politician should, at the minimum, be looking to take care of everyone in their area. A true politician should be looking for ways their area can help the nation or world.

If God has blessed us, it's so we can share it with others. If people who have received God's blessing during these times are focused on anything besides helping the world, they will be doing evil. When politicians focus on "How can I hold on to power?" or "How can I get power?", nothing good will come out of that thinking. Nothing. Neither will anything good come out of focusing on "What will get me more money?"

Parents have spoken. The first focus should be on "How can we restore the environment?" or "How can we feed the world?", "How can we help people raise their families everywhere in the world?" We need a new generation of politicians who are more focused on helping others than holding onto political power.
