WFWP Sweden was once again honored to speak at the annual World Peace Awards in Stockholm which took place at the end of August. This year's theme was Peace, Civil Society and the Environment.

The WPA conference brought together individuals dedicated to the common goal of promoting peace, allowing for meaningful exchanges and collaboration. As speakers, award winners and attendees shared their visions for peace and a harmonious world the atmosphere was charged with inspiration, creativity and unity. The conference also emphasized the role of culture, music and the arts to bring about a peaceful world. Great performances were made all through the conference.

One of the Award winners was Master Amnart, a Buddhist monk and a great international painter. He showed some of his paintings and all carried a peace greeting. An invitation was later extended to visit the Dillich Castle in Germany where he has a permanent art exhibition.

Britta Houston in her speech, highlighted the commitment of WFWP in promoting international dialogue and cooperation for a brighter, more peaceful future and used the metaphor that each person has to be a lighthouse built on a solid rock, lightening up the dark world and saving lives on the turbulent waves of the ocean.

The five-day conference concluded with a captivating cruise to Tallin, Estonia. The time spent together on the boat created deep connections and heartfelt discussions among participants.
