

I believe God created this world largely as described in the Genesis account

Angus McDonald

August 18, 2018

Recently I read that True Mother has said we should arm ourselves with The Principle. I really love that.

I'm guessing that most on this list believe that Divine Principle is a revelation from God and that it is true.

Now to the point. I am a Creationist, I believe God created this world largely as described in the Genesis account. I am aware though that many brothers and sisters believe God used the process of Evolution to create.

Divine Principle though states that we have two bodies. Our Spiritual body and our Physical body. The Spiritual Body lives in the 'ultimately more important' Spiritual World. Divine Principle says that World is Substantial. It is called The Invisible Substantial World. So how does a God that can create billions of eternal substantial bodies for his children require millions of years of evolution to create the 1st human ancestors bodies.?

I'm open to various ways of our eternal Spiritual bodies being created. 1. Would be a seed\baby with all the potential within it and the blueprint within which grows along with our period of Spiritual Growth. 21 years as described in the Original plan.

2. A body created outright which is filled in by our spiritual growth to become it's potential after 21 years of growth or just created outright. Whatever, the original plan is 21 years. So why million of years of evolution to create just the first 2 Physical bodies. I pin my colours to the mast. I believe God created Adam and Eve outright.