FFWPU Showcases Universal Values and Interfaith Dialogue at Frankfurt Buchmesse 2026

FRANKFURT, GERMANY, October 7-11, 2026 - Amid the vibrant, international bustle of the 78th Frankfurter Buchmesse (the biggest book fair in the world) where publishers, thinkers, and literary enthusiasts from around the globe converge to trade ideas and stories, the Family Federation for World Peace and Unification (FFWPU) bookstand stands out as a serene haven for spiritual reflection and interfaith dialogue. Positioned among global religious and philosophical exhibitors, the delegation's presentation draws a steady stream of trade visitors, scholars, and curious readers seeking answers to contemporary moral and social questions.

The bookstand's design blends minimalist aesthetics with warm, open hospitality. Illuminated display panels showcase a diverse collection of literature available in multiple languages, reflecting FFWPU's global outreach. At the centerpiece of the exhibition are foundational works such as the Divine Principle, along with the peace memoirs and speeches of founders Rev. Sun Myung Moon and Dr. Hak Ja Han Moon, notably her autobiography Mother of Peace. Surrounding these core texts are specialized publications on family enrichment, youth leadership, interfaith peacebuilding, and character education - themes that resonate deeply with visitors navigating today's complex socio-cultural landscape.

Throughout the five-day exposition, the booth serves as an active hub for engaging conversations rather than mere literary presentation. Representatives and volunteers engage visitors in thoughtful exchanges regarding the role of universal family values in building lasting global peace. Passersby stop to browse translations in German, English, French, Korean, and Japanese, often pausing to speak with staff members about the practical applications of spiritual principles in modern society, education, and community service.

The FFWPU exhibition highlights a growing interest in literature that bridges traditional faith perspectives with practical world-peace initiatives. Copies of interfaith journal compilations and materials from affiliated organizations - such as the Universal Peace Federation (UPF) and the Women's Federation for World Peace (WFWP) - are actively sought by representatives of non-governmental organizations and educational institutions attending the fair.

As the Frankfurt Book Fair continues its long legacy as a global platform for intellectual and cultural exchange, the FFWPU bookstand exemplifies how faith-based publishing can contribute meaningfully to the overarching conversation on human harmony. Leaving with informational brochures, commemorative volumes, and fresh perspectives, visitors depart the booth with a renewed sense of shared human purpose amidst the vast panorama of world literature.
