Parents who have had children and raised them will know. You will want to be blessed and feel happy through those pampered sons and daughters. Also, if you have a standard for joy and blessing, you will want to leave it to your sons and daughters forever. With such a heart of hope, fallen humans are also hoping to become their sons and daughters. It is the heart of the parents to protect their sons and daughters from being hurt at night or day and to grow up and to be exalted by all nations and to be praised for all ages. So is the heart of fallen parents.

The mother's desperate heart, nurtured by breastfeeding, is the heart of parents, who can forget the environment with love even if the child smells of poop and urine. It is the same with the heart that fallen parents think of their children. How much more was the heart that God, the subject of love, wanted to love Adam and Eve through his natural heart? Everyone, think about it.

When you have a baby and raise a baby, you can sing songs in bed, talk to yourself, and hope that everything goes well. No matter how ugly and inadequate, if the child has a defect, the parent's heart will suffer the greatest pain so that the heart is completely wetted, and when this is released, joy is accompanied by as much as it is proportional to the pain. The heart of fallen parents is the same. What about God's heart? (20-209)
