On Saturday the 25th of November, Professional Artist Ashley Davies held a landscape painting workshop in out Holy Oak Hall. Here is his testimony on how it went...

"I was asked to lead a short community art class for the West Country and Wales members, which I was happy to do. We held it at the memorial ground in Stanton Fitzwarren which is surrounded by beautiful trees and pastures making it a great place channel our creativity.

I decided to focus on landscape painting using acrylics, which is a good starting point for complete beginners. This was more a fun event than a serious painting session, so I just made a short 5 minute presentation to give everyone a starting point and an idea of the methodology of how to paint a landscape.

Everyone had their own idea of what they wanted to paint and it was really interesting seeing the different ways people choose to portray their scene. Everyone had their own unique style and I hope everyone managed to learn something new and also end up with something that they were happy with."
